

Unconfirmed Report Says Turk Vanguard Is in Neutral Zone

British Commander-in-Chief Warned Kemal on Thursday Invasion Would Be Act of War.

BRITISH ENTRENCHED STRONGLY AT CHANAK

Atmosphere Is Tense at Constantinople as Population Hourly Expects Clash of Arms.

Constantinople, September 21.—The vanguard of the Kemal troops is reported to have crossed the neutral zone and reached the Dardanelles. The report, however, has not yet been confirmed.

The Kemal troops were last reported 25 miles from the Dardanelles. General Harrington, the British commander-in-chief in the Near East, warned Kemal Thursday that an invasion of the neutral zone by the Turks would be considered an act of war.

The increasing nervousness of Europeans here reflects an atmosphere pregnant with possibilities. The civil population of Chanak, where the British are strongly entrenched, is being evacuated. It is reported that General Pelle, the French commander, has been unsuccessful in his attempt to conciliate Kemal Pasha.

British military forces are actively engaged in consolidating their positions. These forces are concentrated in three sectors:

1. Chanak. British detachments are strongly entrenched in a position here which commands entrance to the Dardanelles. Destroyers are anchored in the straits nearby. The British general commanding the district considers he is adequately prepared to withstand an attack.

2. Imid peninsula. British forces have established a strong line of aircraft here with the allied fleets supporting it.

3. Constantinople. Large forces of infantry, cavalry, tanks, armored cars, machine guns and aircraft are being concentrated here. The British are preparing for any eventuality and are equipped to put down any possible uprising within the city.

TURK WARNED BY BRITISH GENERAL

Constantinople, September 21.—(By The Associated Press.)—Hamid Bey visited General Harrington, commander of the allied forces, today and explained that what the Kemalists were seeking was the right to cross the Dardanelles, a privilege already accorded to the Greeks.

General Harrington replied that a Turkish advance on the straits meant a declaration of war against Great Britain and would be resisted with all vigor.

Hamid Bey replied that the Kemalists did not wish to fight the British. A means of avoiding a breach was then discussed. General Harrington proposed that a conference be called early in October or sooner and asked Hamid Bey to guarantee observance of the neutrality of the straits until then. The Turkish envoy replied that he could not furnish such a guarantee.

Later General Harrington received the Turkish war minister and the minister of interior and they discussed how peaceful conditions could be maintained in the capital in the event of disorders.

The allied commander warned the war minister that all trouble makers would be arrested and tried by court martial. Plans for the disarmament of the population were considered, but no effective method was found. The Turks insist that the Greeks and Armenians have hidden arms; a similar charge is made by the Greeks and Armenians against the Turks.

The French and Italian generals express regret that their governments find themselves unable to participate in the preparations for defense.

The French commander, however, assured General Harrington that the French troops would assist in every way in preserving order.

All the Angora ministers have been summoned to Smyrna, where the attack is expected.

G. O. P. OLD GUARD IS AGAIN FACING PRIMARY BATTLE

New Jersey Race Next Tuesday Between Frelinghuysen and a Radical Progressive.

WET AND DRY ISSUE FEATURE IN ELECTION

Republican Nominee Will Run Against Governor Edwards, Democrat, Wettest of Wets.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, September 21.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—National interest is being manifested in the primaries of New Jersey next Tuesday when republicans of that state will choose their nominee for the United States senate against the unopposed democratic candidate, Governor Edwards, (the man who would, if he could, make the state of New Jersey as wet as the Atlantic ocean.)

Senator Frelinghuysen, republican, is up for re-election and is being opposed by George L. Record, former Bull Moose and presently radical progressive. Because of his staunch support of the administration and personal friendship with President Harding, the defeat of Senator Frelinghuysen would be looked upon as another blow to the old guard. It would be placed in the same category with the victory of Beveridge, in Indiana; Frazier, of North Dakota, and La Follette, more recently, in Wisconsin, all of whom made opposition to the Harding administration prime issues of the campaign.

Expect Close Race.

The report comes from New Jersey that the contest has warmed up considerably in the past fortnight and that the Frelinghuysen forces have been put to their mettle by the Record campaign. While the conservative element does not concede the defeat of Senator Frelinghuysen, they predict a heavy vote for Mr. Record and expect a close race.

The charge has been heard that an

ELKS' CONVENTION FUND HALF RAISED

With Day and Half To Go This Week, Workers Hope to Complete Job Before Sunday.

With a day and a half still remaining for the Elks' convention fund drive this week, the finance committee still has half of the required amount of $150,000 to raise. Totals announced on Thursday noon showed that $75,000 is now in hand.

Beginning Friday morning, Chairman W. T. Perkins and his two hundred workers will begin an intensive effort to raise the balance before the week-end half holiday. An urgent appeal has been issued from convention board headquarters to all workers, asking them to cover their prospect list at the earliest possible moment and report to the committee on the results.

Contrary to previous announcement, the third and final luncheon for the workers will be held at 12:30 Friday, instead of on Saturday. All members of the committee have been asked to report at Friday's luncheon ready to give a report on the subscriptions they have received and the amount of

Wife Is Witness For Defendant In Paternity Case

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

South Bend, Ind., September 21.—Mrs. Harry Poulin, the first defense witness in the hearing of the paternity case in which Mrs. Augusta Tiersan charges that Harry Poulin is the father of her third child, took the stand today and disputed almost in its entirety the testimony previously given by Mrs. Tiersan concerning the alleged relations between Poulin and Mrs. Tiersan.

The large gallery, whose demonstration had angered Judge Ducomb on several occasions, greeted the defendant's wife, who has maintained belief in her husband's innocence, with hisses and cat-calls. This outburst caused the jurist once more to threaten to clear the chamber.

After the defense witness had, under direct questioning by Attorney Schwartz, testified that she had been at church with her husband on those nights during the Lenten season when Mrs. Tiersan had been with Poulin, she also told of a meeting with Mrs. Tiersan at the Poulin home, February 20,

STRIKE INJUNCTION DECISION PROMISED EARLY SATURDAY

Judge Wilkerson Extends Temporary Restraining Order Until He Announces Hearing Result.

PROPOSED INJUNCTION
READ BY DAUGHTERY

With One Exception, Injunction Asked Is Just as Drastic as Order Now in Force.

Chicago, September 21.—(By The Associated Press.)—Fate of the government's suit for a nationwide injunction against the striking railroad shop workers will be announced Saturday at 11 a. m. by Judge Wilkerson.

In the meantime the temporary restraining order in effect since September 1 is continued in force by order of the court. The order would have expired tonight at midnight.

Attorney-General Daugherty read the draft of the proposed injunction to the court, and after a brief statement in defense of the government's right to enjoin the strikers brought the case to a close at 3 p. m. The hearing started 10 days ago today.

One Modification.

The injunction bill differs but little from the restraining order. Its terms have, in some cases, been made more binding and its phraseology clarified in doubtful passages, but with one exception, it is every bit as drastic as the order now in force.

The one outstanding modification is a paragraph specifically asserting "that nothing contained herein shall be construed to prohibit the use of funds or money of any of said labor organizations for any lawful purpose, and nothing contained in this order shall be construed to prohibit the expression of any opinion or argument not intended to aid or encourage the doing of any of the acts heretofore enjoined or not calculated to maintain or prolong a conspiracy to restrain interstate commerce or the transportation of the mails."

The paragraph forbidding picketing in the vicinity or near the places of ingress or egress of places where railroad employees are required to work has been extended to include a ban against picket posts "along the ways traveled by said employees" to and from their work.

To Extend Ban.

The provisions against pickets attempting to prevent employees from entering upon or continuing their duties has been extended to include "any other person or persons."

The ban against threats of violence against families of workmen will be extended, if the bill is granted, to include not only threats but "intimidations, opprobrious epithets, persuasion or other acts of like character."

To the original restraining order the government has also added in the new bill an additional provision that the application for a preliminary injunction shall be continued against all defendants who have not been legally served with notice of the present hearing, the application to be heard at such time as the court shall select.

Daugherty Explains.

In explanation of the injunction bill, Attorney General Daugherty told the court "that this order does not question the right of a man or any number of men to strike, but it restrains them from unlawfully striking back. The enforcement of this decree will not deprive any man of any lawful right. On the other hand, it will afford protection to every man and all men equally, who come within its operation, with each and every lawful right."

"With law in this country," he con-

WASHINGTON ACTS TO RESUME WORK ON ROAD BUILDING

All Open-Top Cars, Not Needed at Coal Mines, Released By Commerce Commission.

ORDER FOLLOWS MEET HELD HERE WEDNESDAY

Contractors Will at Once Get Busy Bringing Material South for 600 Miles of Paving.

The south's great road building program which has been at a standstill ever since the rail and coal strikes paralyzed transportation, will be resumed, following an order issued Friday by the United States interstate commerce commission to all railroads releasing all open top cars not needed at the coal mines for the hauling of road building materials.

The action of the commission comes in the wake of vigorous protests wired to the commission by the officers of the southern division of the Asphalt Association of New York, state highway officials from six southern states, state engineers, and contractors who were in conference Wednesday at the Ansley hotel.

The order, which was transmitted by wire to the officials of The Asphalt Association in executive session at the Ansley Thursday, means that work can be resumed without further delay, and that thousands of men engaged on southern road building projects will be again employed.

600 Miles of Paving.

Contractors who through the rail tie up faced great financial losses, will issue orders, it is said, that will set the vast road building machinery in the south in motion.

Contracts for 600 miles of asphaltic paving of municipal type have been let in the south, enough to build a boulevard from Atlanta to Washington, D. C.

Officials of the National Sand & Gravel association and the National Crushed Stone company have been in conference with the officers of the interstate commerce commission for the last several days. It was through their efforts and the support they received from the southern material men, contractors, engineers and state officials that caused the modification of the commission's order, which originally released only open top equipment with sides less than 42 inches in height.

The order issued Thursday was wired to Atlanta from Tallahassee, Fla., to J. E. Pennybacker, secretary of the Asphalt Association at the Ansley hotel, by William F. Cooke, state highway engineer of Florida who attended the conference Wednesday.

It reads: "We from McDonald (chief engineer of the United States highway commission) advises service order twenty-five effective today, allows carriers to use all coal cars not needed at the mines for hauling road building material and other commodities, also gives more latitude as to empties moving in direction of mines. Hearing granted today, with view of further extension."

Resolutions Passed.

The protest in the form of a resolution to the Interstate Commerce commission was unanimously adopted at

Station WGM Entertains Indiana Hotel's Guests

"French Lick, Ind. Sept. 21, 1922, 9:30 P. M."

"Station WGM, Atlanta, Ga.: Guests of West Baden hotel now listening to wonderful concert from WGM. With orchestra playing in lobby of hotel, this radio concert is coming in loud and clear. Congratulations to The Constitution and its splendid radio broadcasting set and to Signor Volpi, Miss Douglas and Mrs. Crumley, who have done such beautiful work."

"WEST BADEN HOTEL."

The above telegram tells of the success of Station WGM's concert last night given under the direction of Signor E. Volpi, Atlanta voice teacher, especially for guests of the West Baden hotel, French Lick, Ind. It is a mark of evidence of what Station WGM is doing in the radio department field and is a distinct compliment to Signor Volpi, who directs three programs each week from Station WGM.

Artists on the program last night were Charlotte Crumley, remarkable soprano; Miss Mary Douglas, teacher of violin, and Signor Volpi, who played the piano accompaniments for both the voice and violin selections. Their program was one that stands out in the record of Station WGM for its beauty and splendid quality.

EXPECTED GESTURE ON DYER MEASURE OCCURS IN SENATE

Anti-Lynching Bill Is the Subject of Alleged "Mock Plea" for Consideration in Senate.

PURPOSE OF MEASURE UNANIMOUSLY BACKED

Southern Sentiment, in Particular Wants Lynching Stopped, but Present Attempt Is Trickery.

Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, September 21.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—On the eve of adjournment, republican leaders of the senate today came across with the often predicted and much discussed "political gesture," which observers have declared would be made in connection with the Dyer anti-lynching bill.

Believing almost entirely that the measure would be unconstitutional if passed, majority leaders have been expected all along to entertain no serious intentions of forcing the legislation to a vote. The most that has been predicted on the subject confined itself to political indulgences to take place the latter part of the session, just before the November elections loomed into sight. And now observers are smiling over the familiar phrase: "I told you so."

"Mock Plea."

After a peculiar parliamentary wrangle on the floor today, Senator Shortridge, republican, of California, and author of the committee report on the anti-lynching bill, finally gained recognition and proceeded to deliver what was described as a mock plea for immediate consideration of the bill. He expressed the belief that the matter of constitutionality has been eliminated.

Senator Shortridge's speech is considered among southern democrats and capital observers as merely a political gesture designed to catch votes for the republicans in the forthcoming national election. It is generally understood that his speech will be placarded throughout the eastern states in the hopes of strengthening republican candidates with the negro, where the race is expected to be close.

Observers have asserted all along that there was little seriousness behind the republican move. They have viewed the procedure as an attempt at small politics with a bill which

ALEXANDER FACES TRIAL IN FEDERAL COURT OF ATLANTA

Former District Attorney Put Under Arrest on Charge of Trying to Intimidate Grand Jury.

ALEXANDER IS READY FOR TRIAL AT ONCE

Admits He Wrote Letter to Foreman Asking That Charges Against Dr. Murphy Be Substantiated

Hooper Alexander, former United States district attorney for Georgia, and one of the most prominent attorneys in the south, was arrested late Thursday afternoon on charges growing out of his alleged efforts to intimidate the federal grand jury now in session.

Mr. Alexander was served with the warrant in his office in the Peters building by a United States deputy marshal and in company with the deputy went before United States Commissioner Colquitt Carter where he was released on his own recognizance.

The charges will be heard some time next week, it was stated, at the request of the district attorney. Mr. Alexander expressed his readiness to have the hearing at once but agreed to the postponement until next week.

George E. Golding, special agent of the United States bureau of intelligence, swore out the warrant against Mr. Alexander, charging the former district attorney with attempting to influence the grand jury in the case of Dr. C. E. Murphy, widely known physician, who is charged with violation of the federal narcotic act.

Mr. Alexander admitted that he had written a communication to the foreman of the grand jury urging him to substantiate all testimony that was offered before the grand jury with reference to the charges against Dr. Murphy.

"I don't consider it necessary for me to say one word in my own defense," declared Mr. Alexander to The Constitution Thursday evening. I simply asked the foreman of the grand jury in the communication to have the investigation of the charges against Dr. Murphy supported by testimony and not allow the district attorney's office to place a number of witnesses on the stand whose testimony could not be substantiated."

The grand jury returned an indictment against Dr. Murphy earlier in the afternoon charging him with violating the federal narcotic laws. He will be arraigned before Commissioner Carter at 10 o'clock Friday morning, it was stated by the commission.

Tourists Given Welcome Here At Big Banquet

Bankhead Highway Party Will Leave Atlanta This Morning for Athens.

Dusty, but enthusiastic and unfatigued, marked evidence of having marched over 400 miles, the Bankhead highway tourists returned to Atlanta Thursday night and were greeted with a welcome and a dinner at the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce by that organization.

Two days on the Bankhead route had only made the party eager to press on over other portions of the highway, which it will do Friday morning at 9 o'clock, escorted by delegations from respective towns along the route. Two more days will be required to complete the tour and the good roads advocates will spend Sunday in Greenville, S. C.

Representatives from Athens, where the tourists will spend Friday night; Winder and Hartwell, who were on hand to greet the members of the tour, and a delegation of Carrollton citizens who escorted them into the city, were also guests at the dinner.

Welcomes Visitors.

President W. O. Foote presided and welcomed the visitors on behalf of Atlanta. He then introduced as speakers who had accompanied the tour, Bennehan Cameron, president of the Bankhead National Highway association; J. A. Rountree, director of the United States Good Roads association and the Bankhead association; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, member of the women's commission. M. J. Abney, of Athens; C. N. Ferguson, of Winder, and A. N. Alford, of Hartwell, state officers of the Bankhead system, also spoke.

President Cameron stated that the Bankhead association had as its objective a hard-surfaced road from Washington, D. C., to San Diego, Cal. He said the route promised to become an international, as well as national highway, stating that President Obregon, of Mexico, had given assurance he would aid its extension into that country.

Sailors Murder Case Jurors Are Deadlocked And Retire for Night

COMMITTEE ASKS
PROOF OF FRAUD
IN CITY PRIMARY

Ready to Ask Grand Jury to Investigate Any Charge H. K. Chapman or Others May Make.

RICHARDSON'S FORCE
DEFENDS HIS OFFICE

Chapman Had Charged That Oaths of 4,000 Voters Had Been Taken From Registrar's Office.

Responding to charges made by H. K. Chapman, well-known Atlantan, that fraud existed at the recent city primaries, the city democratic executive committee, in session Thursday at city hall for the purpose of declaring the returns of the election Wednesday, passed a resolution by unanimous vote, promising to seek grand jury indictment against any person Mr. Chapman or other citizens would furnish evidence against showing irregularities.

Mr. Chapman charged that the oaths of 4,000 voters filed with City Registrar W. S. Richardson at the courthouse were stolen and that the lists in the last two primaries did not contain the names of these voters.

Claims He Has Affidavit.

He declared he had in his possession an affidavit from a clerk in Richardson's office admitting that the slips were taken out.

He also declared that he had an affidavit that a candidate in 1921 took the registration list out of the registrar's office and kept it for a week.

The charges were denied under oath by Fred Gibbs, executive committee man and clerk in Tax Collector Richardson's office. Chairman J. P. Haunson allowed Mr. Richardson the privilege of the floor to speak and he branded the accusations as untrue.

Thursday night the office staff of Mr. Richardson issued a statement denying as a "deliberate falsehood" the Chapman charges, and called on him to produce the affidavits he claims to have.

Charge Is Denied.

The undersigned clerks in the office of W. S. Richardson, Fulton county tax collector, note in an afternoon paper that H. K. Chapman says he has an affidavit from a clerk in said office stating that registration oaths or lists were taken from said office contrary to law.

"This we deny as a deliberate falsehood and we evidently do not intend to issue said affidavits, and we call on him to produce the affidavits."

Embezzlement of Insurance Funds Alleged. Mrs. Cain Says She Was Told Deficit Was $12,000

A nation-wide search is being conducted for Arthur H. Cain, for the past three years state claim agent for the Insurance Company of North America, following the issuing of a warrant Thursday afternoon in the Municipal court charging him with forgery and the embezzlement of the company's funds.

Robert N. Hughes, local manager for the company signed the warrant, which was turned over to the Pinkerton agents in Atlanta.

A search for Cain started Wednesday when it is said, an alleged shortage of thousands of dollars was discovered at the insurance company's offices in the Georgia building. The warrant was issued when it was determined he had left the city.

Sister of Defendant Tells Jury She Had Agreed to Make Trip With Victim to Athens.

DEFENDANT ON STAND
ADMITS HITTING MARTIN

Claims He Struck Him After Altercation Over Proposed Trip—Self-Defense Plea Made.

After eight hours' deliberation the jurors in the trial of W. E. Sailors, 24, of 302 Means street, charged with murder in connection with the death of J. L. Martin, middle-aged farmer, of Mayville, Ga., on Marietta street on the night of August 25, were still deadlocked at 10 o'clock last night, and retired to their rooms at the Ansley hotel.

The trial of young Sailors was begun early Thursday morning in criminal division of Fulton superior court with Judge R. N. Hardeman, of Louisville, Ga., presiding. Examinations of witnesses, including testimony from Miss Hazel Sailors, sister of the defendant, and completion of arguments by both defense and prosecution was concluded by 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Judge Hardeman charged the jury, which immediately retired to reach a verdict.

Sensational developments were revealed in the testimony of Miss Hazel Sailors, who admitted that she and Martin the slain man, had planned to take a trip to Athens on the day following the homicide, which occurred a short distance from the Sailors' home about 10:30 o'clock at night.

Admits Hitting Martin.

The defendant declared that he struck Martin with his left hand following an altercation five minutes after Martin had left his sister at her front door. Sailors asserted he intended only to remonstrate with Martin about "keeping company" with his sister, when Martin suddenly reached toward his hip pocket as if to draw a deadly weapon. The young man stated he then struck Martin, who fell to the pavement with considerable force, striking his head on the pavement. Martin died at Grady hospital two hours later, physicians pronouncing his death due to a fractured skull.

"I had no intention of killing that man," Sailors testified. "I did not want him to take my sister away from town. My wife told me she had seen a letter from Martin asking sister to go to Athens with him. My little sister, Thelma, also told me that she saw Martin give Hazel $3 that afternoon with which to pay her railroad fare to Athens."

"When my wife spoke to Martin earlier in the evening about the matter, he called her a damned liar. I followed Martin after he returned about 10:30 o'clock in the night with my sister, intending only to talk to him in a manly way and tell him not to continue going with my sister. He got sore and made an effort to reach for his hip pocket. I feared he had a gun and I struck him with my fist. I am left handed and I hit him with my left fist. He fell to the pavement and I saw that he was dazed. I didn't know that he was dead until I read it in the newspapers the next morning."

"My reasons for not telling my side of the case sooner was because I was advised to remain silent by my lawyer. I am sorry that Mr. Martin is dead, but I did what anyone else would have done."

Girl Called to Stand.

Miss Hazel Sailors was called to the stand as a state's witness by Assistant Solicitor-General E. A.

Stephens and was closely examined. She admitted that she intended leaving for Athens the next day where she was to meet Martin. She denied that he had proposed to marry her. "We had planned to leave for Athens and Mr. Martin had given me $5 that afternoon to pay my fare. Our plans were formulated while Mr. Martin, my little sister, Thelma, and myself were out riding in an automobile that afternoon. We were to leave from about 3:30 until 6:50 in the machine and he returned at 8 o'clock and took me riding again after which we went to a moving picture show."

Miss Sailors testified that she returned with Martin to her home about 10:30 o'clock and he left her a few minutes later. She did not know that he had been killed until next day, she declared.

Other witnesses testifying for the state were Mrs. W. C. Baxley, who resides a short distance from the scene of the homicide, and H. L. Simmons, who resides in the Sailors home. Both described the altercation between young Sailors and Martin which terminated in angry words and a blow being struck by Sailors.

Heard the Blow. Mrs. Baxley stated she heard the blow which sounded like a bottle bursting. Looking from her window she testified that she saw a man hurriedly walking down the street and another man was lying on the pavement.

Simmons stated he heard part of the conversation that passed between Sailors and Martin as they passed him on Doss street near Marietta, and Bellwood avenue. He stated he heard Martin call his companion "a liar" and heard Sailors reply, "don't say that again." In the light from a street lamp, Simmons declared he saw Martin suddenly make a motion with his hand toward his hip pocket. Sailors then struck him, Simmons declared.

The last witness to testify was Thelma Sailors, sister of the defendant, who told of seeing Martin give her sister $5 with which to "meet him in Athens."

Assistant Solicitor Stephens maintained the defendant was guilty of murder regardless of whether the blow from Sailors' fist or contact with the pavement caused the death of Martin. He cited other cases from the supreme court which he claimed had been upheld in this regard by that tribunal.

territory which still remains to be covered.

Plan Roundup Friday.

"One of the most serious handicaps our committee has encountered has been our inability to keep in close touch with every member of the field force," states Chairman Perkins. "This final roundup which we are to hold Friday noon at the Ansley is designed primarily to round up every man, who reported for duty at the Elks' club on Monday night and to learn from him exactly what has been accomplished in the way of covering his assignment."

"Those members of the staff who were at Thursday's luncheon have been asked to get in touch with other workers and see to it that they are brought to this final meeting of our committee."

A number of important subscriptions are expected to be announced Friday. Several bodies of business men are expected to contribute to the fund. Each of these is expected to be large and to swell materially the present total.

Secretary B. C. Broyles, in calling attention to the fact that it is impossible to reach every public spirited citizen in the city who might wish to contribute to the entertainment fund for the convention, states that all those who have not yet been approached may send their contributions directly to him at the Elks' home on East Ellis street. Pledges payable the tenth of November, December and January may also be made in the same way.

Birmingham Coming. The convention board was greatly enthused Thursday upon the receipt of news from Birmingham to the effect that the steel city is preparing already to come to Atlanta with a wonderful delegation and a big display. A band of forty pieces has recently been organized under the direction of Otto Miller, who organized the San Antonio band that was heard in Atlanta in July; and other features are in course of preparation.

Harry G. Butler, district deputy of south Georgia, has informed the Atlanta lodge that a fund of $10,000 is being raised in Savannah to entertain all delegates who pass through that city on their way to Atlanta. He also states that the Savannah lodge will have a drum corps of 50 members and 200 men in uniform in the convention parade here.

attempt will be made to have democrats ballot for Mr. Record, on the theory that if he were nominated Governor Edwards would have a better chance of success in November. Students of the situation, however, are inclined to discredit this statement, as the chief issue in New Jersey appears to have been drawn along wet and dry lines.

Senator Frelinghuysen is 100 per cent dry, Governor Edwards is a better wet; while Mr. Record, though non-committal on the wet and dry issue, is surrounded with a rather humid atmosphere.

It is argued from this that the wet and dry issue is acute in the state, and that for this reason democrats would stand a better chance at victory with the issue clearly defined as between the two party nominees. But the strength which the democrats would gain from the wet contingent at the event of Senator Frelinghuysen's nomination would be further balanced by the support of anti-administration republicans who are lined up with Mr. Record.

chances, then, would be considered better in November if Frelinghuysen is renominated, although his defeat would be hailed as an administration setback.

committee, as making the statement to him that ballots with certification were thrown out in the first election.

Mr. Hollingsworth stated that Mr. Chapman had evidently misunderstood him. "What I did say," he explained, "was that the rule barring the certification had been thrown out."

After the committee had listened to Mr. Chapman's charges, Chairman Hanson asked Mr. Gibbs if he were willing to be questioned under oath. Mr. Gibbs said he was.

"Has any candidate for city office ever borrowed a list of the voters from the office of the registrar?" he asked.

"No, sir," replied the committee man.

"Did anybody ever borrow a list who afterwards became a candidate?" he pursued.

"Not that I have any knowledge of," Gibbs answered.

Mr. Richardson declared that no candidate for city, county or state office had ever received any special privileges through his office.

He stated that as he had formerly explained, W. M. Scott, chairman of the county board of registrars, had destroyed about 700 slips, which he thought were duty oaths, but which in reality were duty oaths.

In his talk before the committee he called attention to the increase in the number of votes cast in the runoff.

"I'll explain that," broke in Committee Chairman O. E. Collum. "The word 'warrant' was over town and bought the votes up."

Jesse W. Armstrong, who defeated Alderman W. C. Davis in Wednesday's election, gave out a statement Thursday, thanking his friends for their support, which resulted in his securing a majority over his opponent. He committed himself to a policy of aiding in an active campaign for a progressive and constructive administration of the city's affairs.

Mr. Chapman asked the executive committee to make a ruling whereby an outstanding citizen, such as Mayor against Walter A. Sims in the general election to be held in November.

The committee's reply was to declare the nominees of Wednesday "the nominees and no other." This does not preclude an independent candidate from running.

Dr. H. Grant spoke in defense of the election managers against charges of "crookedness" at some of the polls, and declared that when the whole question is sifted to the bottom it will be found that most of those who were refused a vote were those who had not paid their taxes.

The official consolidation of ballots by the committee showed the following results at the election Wednesday:

For mayor—Sims, 7,244; Woodward, 6,272.

For chief of construction—Hansell, 7,090; Robert, 6,420.

For alderman from the seventh ward—Armstrong, 8,744; Davis, 4,570.

For councilman, tenth ward—Cooper, 551; Freeman, 378.

Urges Georgia Bond Issue. He urged that Georgia get solidly behind her proposed bond issue for good roads and put it over next year, asserting that state aid is essential if government funds are to be received.

Mr. Rountree reviewed the history of the Bankhead highway movement and its success. He said that the route—3,600 miles—can now be traversed in 365 days in the year, and he thought that within a comparatively short time it would be an easy matter to get the government to take over the highway.

Among the members of her commission who were present at the dinner were Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, Mrs. Lollie Belle Wylie, Mrs. W. P. Ford, Mrs. T. D. Stevens, Mrs. Robert E. business affairs—I was content to just be happy with him. If he will only come back—if he only knew how I believed in him. Guilty or not guilty, I will stand at his side, and endure anything."

During the interview Mrs. Cain wept bitterly. "Why didn't he take me with him," she sobbed. "I would have followed him anywhere. He left the house Wednesday morning after breakfast and that is the last I have seen or heard of him. If he will only come back, I will do anything, if he has done anything wrong, why that means he needs me more than ever."

$12,000 Is Missing. Mrs. Cain, who she heard of the alleged shortage she went to Mr. Hughs' office in an effort to learn of the details. She said she was told that several thousand dollars of the company's money was missing.

She stated that she was told that approximately $12,000 would cover the deficit, but that she is the only one who really knows the actual amount.

Mr. Hughs could not be reached Thursday night. At his home it was stated that he had left the city early in the evening.

No announcement concerning the case was made at Pinkerton headquarters. "What I did say," he explained, "was that the rule barring the certification had been thrown out."

After the committee had listened to Mr. Chapman's charges, Chairman Hanson asked Mr. Gibbs if he were willing to be questioned under oath. Mr. Gibbs said he was.

"Has any candidate for city office ever borrowed a list of the voters from the office of the registrar?" he asked.

"No, sir," replied the committee man.

"Did anybody ever borrow a list who afterwards became a candidate?" he pursued.

"Not that I have any knowledge of," Gibbs answered.

Mr. Richardson declared that no candidate for city, county or state office had ever received any special privileges through his office.

He stated that as he had formerly explained, W. M. Scott, chairman of the county board of registrars, had destroyed about 700 slips, which he thought were duty oaths, but which in reality were duty oaths.

In his talk before the committee he called attention to the increase in the number of votes cast in the runoff.

"I'll explain that," broke in Committee Chairman O. E. Collum. "The word 'warrant' was over town and bought the votes up."

Senator Borah, when questioned concerning its ultimate disposition, stated that if a report were issued it would be unfavorable.

Without Leadership. "This great body of public opinion of our country, favorable to the league of nations, has been flouted and ignored, because since the illness of President Wilson it has been without a program and without specific leadership."

"I am much too old to aspire to, or to desire leadership of so great a cause—we shall hope to achieve much in two years, but it may take ten. I resigned that I might have leisure to travel, to read and to become better acquainted with my own soil before it leaves my body. But, nevertheless, perhaps I may be of service in aiding in the search for the man or group of men and women competent for such leadership, and in bringing together for conference the outstanding figures among the 'true believers' in various parts of our country regardless of party affiliation, in the hope of formulating modifications, if necessary, of the league covenant, on which we can all agree, or, if that proves impossible, framing a statement with the nearest approximation to an agreement that can be arrived at."

Leadership Passing. "The moral leadership which was so certainly ours at the close of the war, is passing, plainly passing, to Great Britain along with an invisible business prestige, springing from the courage with which the government of this country is meeting world problems and the generosity with which it proposes to deal with its former allies financially."

But word was passed along the line that if the report were made nothing would come of it; that it was desired simply as a political gesture, which would be sufficient for the primary elections, impending.

With this, the bill was reported favorably, Senator Shortridge writing the report. What observers look up on as highly amusing is a clause included by Senator Shortridge which says:

"I believe that all these men and women, in declaring for international co-operation to secure the peace of the world, were expressing their honest convictions, that they should be taken at their word, and that so considered they constitute a controlling public opinion of the United States. decision to hold the troops at Chanak. The British government has been advised by military and naval experts that the troops are in no danger of attack by the Kemalists. It is further stated that the British navy, in co-operation with the land forces, could withstand a strong attack by the Turks, but, if overwhelmed by superior numbers, which is regarded as highly unlikely, the troops could be easily withdrawn to Gallipoli, under cover of the naval guns.

Other Troops Leave. Meanwhile, according to dispatches from Constantinople, the French and Italian contingents have been withdrawn from the neutral zones by order of their governments. The British say they have the assurance of Premier Poincare himself that the Turks will not attack, the premier declaring that the only danger was from Turkish irregulars.

M. Poincare, however, has made a strong plea for the retirement of the British forces, on the ground that such a move would hasten peace and bring about the formation of a like party in the Angora government.

A further decision of the British government, which will be formally announced at tomorrow's meeting, is that its representatives will go to the proposed conference with an open mind and will refuse to concede the Turkish claims to Thrace, Adrianople and Constantinople in advance of the peace meeting. These two decisions came as a great disappointment to France which had hoped for withdrawal of the British forces and tentative acceptance of the Turkish claims. By Great Britain as a preliminary to the conference.

The British contend that if the Turkish demands were accepted immediately there would be no need of a conference. Complete accord between France and Great Britain there is none. Tomorrow's session of the national conference will confine itself to fixing the date and place for the conference and the possible drawing up of the agenda.

Ferdinand, the national representative in Paris, informed the Associated Press this evening that the reply of the Angora government regarding the conference would probably come within two or three days.

FORD AUTO PLANTS RESUME OPERATION

Closed Down Last Saturday, Great Industry Again Hums With Activity Today.

Detroit, September 21.—Henry Ford's "industrial strike" came to an end tonight.

At midnight his great automobile plants in the Detroit district employing upward of 70,000 men, and which were closed for an indefinite period last Saturday as the manufacturer's protest against what he termed "excessive coal prices," again were the scenes of industrial activity.

The order for the reopening of the plants came this forenoon from Edsel Ford, son of the manufacturer and president of the Ford Motor company, who made arrangements to obtain coal during a long conference in Cincinnati yesterday with fifty mine operators. The reopening order was approved by Henry Ford and official announcement given to the thousands of Ford workers throughout the country who daily, since the shutdown, have scanned the newspaper headlines in their eagerness to learn when their wages would start again.

Edsel Ford in his telegram, copies of which were dispatched to every Ford assembling plant in the country, said the interstate commerce commission's latest order permitting the flow of fuel to automobile plants previously put in the non-essential class, made it possible to obtain a sufficient supply of the class of coal required to operate the Ford enterprise.

President Names Fire Prevention Day for Nation

Washington, September 21.—President Harding today issued a proclamation designating Monday, October 9, as National Fire Prevention day. The fire waste of the United States year after year, the president declared, reaches appalling figures. There ought to be special effort, he added, to minimize such losses.

The text of the proclamation follows: "It has become a nation-wide custom to observe October 9, anniversary of the great Chicago fire of 1871, as National Fire Prevention day; and, in recognition of this excellent precedent, I am herewith directing the attention of all citizens, especially those in authority in the states and cities, to the desirability of continuing the observance of this year."

"It has long been a reproach to our country that, by reason of poor construction, inadequate facilities for fire prevention, and an all too general carelessness about possible causes of conflagration, our fire waste reaches figures year after year which are not approached in any other country in the world. Mindful of the fire waste which is expressed in figures so huge as to be appalling, it may be emphasized that in time, when all communities need to conserve resources in hand and to promote production in every possible way, there ought to be special effort to minimize such losses."

"I, Warren G. Harding, president of the United States, appeal to the public authorities of the country, by such measures as to them may seem most effective, and to citizens generally, to take steps for the observance of Monday, October 9, as 'Fire Prevention day.' I suggest the special desirability of impressing upon the teachers and pupils in the schools and all workers in industrial establishments the importance of precautionary measures for avoidance of fires. By such measures, earnestly undertaken and vigorously enforced, we shall contribute to a vast economy of the national resources and of the product of human effort, as well as to a saving of many hundreds of human lives now needlessly sacrificed.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done in the city of Washington, this sixteenth day of September in the year of Our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-two, and on the independence of the United States, the one hundred and forty-seventh.

"Signed,"

"WARREN G. HARDING."

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States at the same time announced that local commercial bodies throughout the United States will take the lead in observance of Fire Prevention week, from October 2 to 9.

The chamber in a statement said: "Property valued at about $7,800,000,000 was destroyed by fire in the United States during the forty years ending with 1921. The loss during the last year of this period was approximately six times as great as that of the first year. In 1921 more than 15,000 lives were lost and property valued at half a billion dollars was destroyed by fire."

"During the first seven months of the current year, property valued at $280,000,000 was added to the nation's ash heap."

Judge Newt Morris
In Fist Fight With Charles Head Thursday

Marietta, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—A quarrel growing out of the recent political campaign came to a head in the office of the ordinary this morning, when Judge Newt Morris and Charles H. Head engaged in a fist-fight that resulted in several bruises for both.

Meeting Mr. Head in the court house, Judge Morris is said to have asked him to retract the statement made in a card that Mr. Head had printed in the local press, which charged Judge Morris with unfair campaign methods against Mr. Head's election to the legislature.

Judge Morris later asked for the withdrawal of a warrant sworn out against Mr. Head by J. W. Belliff, J. W. Morris, who witnessed the fight and tried to separate the combatants.

Plan Motorcade
As Protest Against Condition of Highway

Waycross, Ga., September 22.—(Special.)—The junior chamber of commerce of Jacksonville is preparing to stage a motorcade to Folkston Saturday, as a rolling protest to the authorities of Florida, against the present condition of the Waycross-Jacksonville stretch of the Central Dixie highway.

The Jacksonville civic body has issued an invitation to the Waycross county chamber of commerce to join with them in the motorcade, and meet them at Folkston, where a joint meeting of the two civic bodies will be held. President Harry D. Reed, of the local body will address the meeting.

Officials of the local chamber of commerce have issued an appeal to all automobile owners in Waycross to join in the movement to better the condition of the road. The Jacksonville club is expecting its full membership to attend and Waycross is anxious to equal the Jacksonville attendance.

Underpass Closing On Forsyth Street Now Seems Certain

With city council's approval back of the plan to close the Forsyth street underpasses, and the interested property owners' half of the cost practically subscribed, it appeared certain Thursday that this improvement, so long agitated, will be carried through in conjunction with the erection of a Spring street viaduct.

The scheme to close the underpasses beneath the Forsyth street bridge carries with it the provision to widen to a driveway 20 feet wide the alley between the Rhodes building and Beck & Gregg Hardware company, opening from Marietta street this new means of ingress and egress to and from the rear of the building yards. The freight routes at present are through the underpasses. The widened driveway will be an extension of Fairlie street, which intersects Marietta at city hall.

Engineering estimates of the total cost of closing the underpasses, extending Fairlie street and making the necessary alterations to buildings affected by widening the alleyway, are approximately $120,000.

Proponents of the viaduct, after studying the value of the financial benefits to themselves, as well as great traffic improvement, which the proposed change would bring about, agreed to subscribe half the cost, if the city would bear the other half.

Council formally approved the plan at its last meeting and steps will be taken immediately to find the money.

Another important change planned in connection with the Spring street viaduct is the removal of fire station No. 1, on West Alabama street, to another location, and if this is done it is expected that the proposed Alabama street lateral approach to the viaduct will be built. The approach would greatly alleviate traffic congestion and facilitate its movement in the business district, since automobiles could "short cut" onto Spring street, a 90-foot, newly-paved boulevard free of street car tracks.

A subcommittee of the board of firemasters has taken charge. Councilman R. A. Gordon is chairman and the other members are Alderman Oscar Williamson, Councilman Claude Buchanan and Councilman Frank Callaway, chairman of the board. They are to make recommendations to council.

It is agreed that the firehouse location should be removed to less cramped quarters. The present building, which houses the elaborate and costly signal equipment, is not fireproof.

Councilman Gordon said Thursday that the committee would get busy on the problem at once and would be ready with definite recommendations before the end of the year, if possible.

$43.75 to $89.75

—The very last word from Fashion's lips is "Draped Dresses." So great has been the popularity of the draped dress that it has been almost impossible to keep an assortment of them. Today we've just unpacked some lovely ones, but we know they'll be gone in just a short while.

—Of Canton crepe, satin faced Canton, brocade crepe and tangerine crepe. Some are draped on both sides with the flowing drapery falling lower than the hemline in back and front. Others are draped on one side only. Some have girdles of flowers; some have the drapery caught with cabochons at the belt; one model has its drapery held in place with a huge silk rose. But all the attention hasn't been given to the skirts. You should see the sleeves of these lovely dresses, how they're draped and caught and cuffed and embroidered.

—And then, of course, there are dresses in other styles—beautiful styles with long pleated panels, basque effects with full skirts, circular skirts, etc., priced from $23.75 to $73.50.

A Splendid Assortment of Fashionable Footwear $5.00 to $8.50

—Can I really find fashionable shoes at such little prices? you're thinking. Yes, indeed, you can—right here in High's Shoe Shop. And not just one or two models to select from, but a good variety of styles. No, they're not specially priced. We make a practice of showing good shoes every day at these low prices.

---Among the Styles You'll Find:

- Patent vamps with brocade straps and quarters.
- Black and brown kid, one and two straps.
- Patent and satin, one straps.
- Russia calf one and two straps.
- Oxfords of brown and black kid and calf.
- These have welt or turn soles, with Baby Louis, full Louis, military and Cuban heels.

ALLEGED PICKPOCKET FINED BY RECORDER

J. C. Cooper, 39, of Winder, Ga., who was arrested by Detectives J. C. Davis and H. Officers Davis and Andrews stated

Change in Rates Will Hurt South Asserts Guthrie

That the proposed changes in southern freight class rates, as recommended by the railroads, would react against commerce in the south, especially wholesale and retail grocery trade, was the statement Thursday of T. D. Guthrie, traffic manager of the American Wholesale Grocers association, and Francis E. Kamper, president of the National Retail Grocers' association, at the southern class rate investigation conducted by the interstate commerce commission in the federal building here.

The carriers' proposal to eliminate classification and cancel all shipments of less than carload lots would greatly increase rates on food products, Mr. Guthrie stated. These rates would greatly increase the cost of living in this section and would have a tendency to put out of business many wholesale houses dependent upon shipments of food products from northern and western markets, it was stated.

Mr. Guthrie's statements were substantiated by Mr. Kamper, who testified that the retail grocery business would face a serious crisis in the event the rates were raised.

Letters from merchants all over the south protesting against the increase in freight rates on less than carload shipments were offered in testimony by Mr. Guthrie and Mr. Kamper.

The session Thursday of the investigation, which is being heard before Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman and Examiner H. J. Waggoner, was announced. Beginning October 4, the investigation will be resumed in Asheville, N. C.

that they watched the man run his hands in the pockets of several persons, including those of Lawyer T. P. Goodwin and a former policeman, Jim Kirk. The man claimed, according to the officers, that he was drunk and didn't know what he was doing.

NATIONAL BODY WILL OPEN OFFICE HERE

The importance of Atlanta as a business center is further recognized in a material way by the decision of the United States Chamber of Commerce to have a resident representative located here, it was announced by B. S. Barker, secretary of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Barker is in receipt of a letter stating that John L. McDougal, who will represent the National chamber in Atlanta, will arrive Monday morning.

Mr. McDougal will act as resident manager of circulation for the "Nation's Business," the magazine published by the United States Chamber of Commerce, and will also co-operate with the local organization in the collection and distribution of information needed by the business world. Mr. Barker states that the local organization will co-operate in every way possible with Mr. McDougal and that he is sure Atlanta will justify the establishment of this office.

"For Atlanta to have a resident representative of the chamber of commerce of the United States means a great deal," said Mr. Barker, "not only to Atlanta, but to the south in general. Through his presence here the local chamber of commerce will keep more closely in touch with the national organization, and this cannot help but mean more satisfactory results for all concerned."

SHOTGUN AND PISTOL ROUT NEGRO BURGLAR

A shot gun and pistol were used by F. C. Witherspoon, of 16 Holder street, when he found a negro burglar who had entered the bedroom of Mrs. Wolff, of the same address, and was found in the act of robbing the bureau drawers.

Mrs. Wolff and her husband occupy the house jointly with the owners, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Witherspoon. Shortly before the burglar entered some one had come to the door and sum-

Spotlight Turned On Young Atlanta At Lakewood Fair

Young Atlanta will occupy the spotlight at the Southeastern fair this year on the first three nights of the big exposition when the school children and young people of the city will participate in a mammoth educational pageant, "Be Fit America," according to a statement issued last night from the office of J. Oscar Mills, president of the fair association.

School authorities of the city are co-operating with the fair officials in presenting this program. Superintendent of schools, Willis A. Sutton, has endorsed the project and is leading his assistance to the fair officials. Mrs. Annie T. Wise, principal of Commercial High, Miss Myra Graves, physical director of the grammar schools and Miss Jessie Muse, principal of Girls' High school, have all offered their help in staging the pageant.

The American boy and girl are seen in the pageant as at first, ruining their chances by the improper manner of eating in which food "Gee Gaws" from their diet. Having lost the key to the domain of Fame and Fortune, they call on Milk for aid. She immediately brings to their assistance the important food values, each of which brings a portion of the key. When the key is again complete the children are able to enter and bring out the gifts of Fame and Fortune, which they distribute among the various states.

The entire production is to be under the supervision of J. Clarence Sullivan, whose Ohio State fair pageants have been so popular. The dances and drills are to be taught by Annette Brance Siddall.

moned Mr. Wolff to help repair a motor truck that had become disabled nearby.

Mr. Wolff had been away from the house less than 10 minutes, it is said, when his wife discovered the negro burglar in her room. He had two large rocks in his hands. She screamed and Mr. Witherspoon rushed to her aid, the negro jumping out of a nearby window.

CLUB MEMBERS HEAR INTERESTING TALKS

Members of the Secretaries' club enjoyed a short talk on the development of Atlanta during the past few years at their regular meeting at luncheon at the pine room of the Ansley hotel Thursday at 12:30 o'clock. R. E. Boggs, former president of the Spartanburg Rotary club, who was a visitor in Atlanta, spoke to the secretaries concerning the surprising developmental changes which have taken place in the city since his last visit here several years ago.

President W. O. Foote, of the chamber of commerce, in a short talk, commented favorably on the co-operation being shown the chamber of commerce, and emphasized the value of this organization to the city as a whole.

Harry O. Mitchell, secretary of the Atlanta Air board, expressed deep satisfaction over the recent purchase of a landing site for airplanes. Mr. Mitchell pointed out the fact that this would result in attracting new

Five Buildings Burn in Menacing Fire at Greensboro

Greensboro, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—Fire of unknown origin early Thursday morning destroyed five buildings on Broad street occupied by negro stores, a pressing club, barber shop and restaurant.

For a time the fire threatened to spread through the entire business section of the city, but splendid work on the part of the volunteer fire department prevented further damage. The intense heat of the flames broke plate glass windows across the street. The loss was not covered by insurance.

industries to Atlanta in the shape of airplane assembling plants, and also emphasized the value of the field because of its improving transportation facilities.

R. L. Troy, secretary of the junior chamber of commerce, spoke for a few minutes on the "Safety First" campaign being conducted in the city.

W. E. Hixon, president of the Secretaries' club, invited the club to a barbecue at his home near Adams-ville at the date of their next meeting, the third Thursday in October. One new member, B. C. Broyles, secretary of the Elks' club, was elected Thursday. Secretary John E. Ad-

NEW BONUS BILL NOW INTRODUCED

Senator Bursum Brings
Another Soldier Compensation Measure Before Senate Thursday.

Washington, September 21.—Senator Bursum, republican, New Mexico, today introduced into the senate another bonus measure, defined in its title as the "veterans' refund and adjusted compensation act."

The measure would provide for payments of $20 for each month of service, together with the return of all compulsory allotments made by the service men and payments on account of government insurance between April 5, 1917 and July 1, 1919. No provision is made for financing the bonus.

Where the amount due a veteran did not exceed $50, it would be paid in full in October 1, 1923. In all other cases 50 per cent would be paid October 1, 1923, and the remainder on October 1, 1926, together with interest at 4 per cent. The obligations given by the government on unpaid sums could not be used as security for loans except under regulations prescribed by the secretaries of war and navy.

SCHOOL TEACHER HIT BY GOLF STICK DIES

Racine, Wis., September 21.—Miss Evelyn Calman, Depere, Wis., a teacher in the Racine public schools, is dead as the result of an accidental blow delivered with a golf stick by Allan Simpson, assistant district attorney of this county, last evening, while he was demonstrating the science of driving a golf ball on a lawn.

Simpson was showing the stroke to

Episcopal Bishops Re-Elect Gailor Church President

Portland, September 21.—Bishop T. F. Gailor, of Tennessee, was re-elected by the house of bishops of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States. He has held the place since the national council was created three years ago.

The election of Bishop Gailor was on the seventh ballot, three of which were taken in secret session. Bishop C. H. Brent, of western New York, asked that the election be made unanimous when Bishop Gailor received 66 votes on the seventh ballot.

Bishop Gailor, when advised that he had been elected for the fourth time, said:

"I am very deeply grateful and will with all my heart thank the members of this house for their confidence in me. I have left this matter in God's hands, and I believe he has directed me. I am an American and I accept the American decree that a majority rules. I will be guided by that principle in carrying out the policies of the church."

There has never been a bishop in this house, who has tried to advise me, who has found that I was unwilling to accept suggestions. I shall do every thing in my power to make this church of ours realize the possibilities that are before it."

Bishop Gailor said he had expressed the wish that he be relieved of the duties of the office.

Bishop Brent was his only opponent.

a number of feminine devotees of the game, when Miss Calman, who was sitting on the porch of the residence, stepped down behind him just as he lifted the driver in his back yard over his shoulder. The club struck the young woman just back of the ear. She died 15 minutes later.

CORONER WILL PROBE MRS. PHILLIPS' DEATH

The sudden death Thursday afternoon of Mrs. J. C. Phillips, 32, in her apartment at 45 East Cain street, will be probed by a coroner's jury Friday morning at an inquest to be held in the chapel of Greenberg & Bond.

Mrs. Phillips, who was a saleslady at the Ellis Millinery store on Peachtree street, died about 3 o'clock in the afternoon after an illness of five days, it is said. She was not thought to have been seriously sick by friends and her attending physician.

City Detective Bentley and Satterfield, who visited Mrs. Phillips' apartment immediately after her death, became known. Miss Claire McAdams, of 32 East Cain street, and Mrs. R. A. Craddock, who has an apartment in the same building were with the woman who died.

Miss McAdams stated she had known Mrs. Phillips for several months and helped her get the position she held with the Ellis Millinery company. Miss McAdams stated that Mrs. Phillips became despondent following the receipt of a letter from the American decree that a majority rules. I will be guided by that principle in carrying out the policies of the church."

Sunday, Miss McAdams stated, she received a telephone request from Mr. Ellis, asking her to find out what was the trouble with Mrs. Phillips. This, she said, was the first intimation she had of her sickness.

Mrs. Phillips is survived by her mother, who lives in Broad Brook, Conn. She formerly lived in Boston, Mass., then in Hartford, Conn.

DEAVER IS NAMED

ASST. U. S. ATTORNEY AT MACON OFFICE

Savannah, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—Setting at rest reports and denials with reference to the naming of an assistant district attorney for this district, orders from the United States attorney-general went by way of Savannah to Macon today ordering the administration of the oath of office to Bascow S. Deaver, a Macon attorney, to be assistant district attorney. He takes the place of Charles Donnelly, of Savannah, who recently took the place of Charles D. Russell, resigned, orders were also announced transferring Charles Redding, assistant district attorney, from Macon to Savannah.

Moonshiners Blamed
For Shots Which Hit
U. S. Naval Balloon

Rock Hill, S. C., September 21.—A United States naval balloon which, its officers reported, was fired upon near Monroe, S. C., landed near here late yesterday because of loss of gas, it was learned here today. The firing presumably was done by moonshiners, it was said, but none of the five occupants was injured.

The balloon in command of Lieutenant W. J. MacDusky, was said to have been en route from Norfolk to a point on the Gulf coast, but after it landed it was picked up for shipment back to Norfolk. There it was understood an examination would be made to determine whether any of the bullets took effect.

Officers were quoted as saying the gas bag began to leak shortly after they were fired upon and that although they discarded all possible ballast they finally had to descend.

The gas bag left Norfolk at 4 p. m. Tuesday, it was said, and had been making excellent time until it began to leak.

Do Men Prefer Fools or Brainy Women as Wives?

Noted Writer Discusses "Absurd Contention" in Mating Argument.

Editors Note: Following is the first of two signed stories by Margaret Deland, noted writer, on the question, "Do men like brainy women?"

Mrs. Deland, in tonight's story, discusses the question, and denies that all men "at heart prefer a fool" for a wife.

In her second story Mrs. Deland tells in detail the reason for her view.

BY MARGARET DELAND,
Author of the "Vehement Flame."
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

"Men are queer when it comes to getting married," somebody said; "look at the sort of women they pick out—perfect idiots! Almost any married woman, and certainly every spinster, could make a better choice for them."

"The reason is," someone else said, "that every man, at heart, prefers a fool."

"Only if he is a fool himself," the first woman said, glibly; and after that conversation flagged, for both these ladies were married, and to enlarge upon the topic might lead to personalities. Yet they might have gone a little farther, and said that all the fools—because there are no other people to like. It's a matter of relativity, as Einstein says. Certainly he has discovered only nine other people in the world who, in his judgment, are as wise as himself! And who can these nine marry, if not people who are, relatively, fools?

Now Comes Question.

But the question arises, would these nine super-wise men like to marry women as wise as themselves? Some people are saying that they would not; that when it comes to falling in love, "every man, at heart, prefers a fool." The reason given for this preference is that a mental inferior makes no special demand on a man's gray matter, and hence is easier to live with than a superior. It's always less straining to look down than to look up!

But no husband of a foolish wife will deny that to look down can be very straining also. A dressed-up doll is well enough, but when he is hungry, a cook is better. A playmate is amusing, but if the playmate tears a hole in his pocketbook, his inclination is to stop playing. A fool may be as pretty as possible, but if she ruins his children, he thinks of the divorce court.

Absurd Contention.

On the other hand, shall a man marry someone who can only cook and economize, and who is very plain, besides? The contention that he must do one or the other seems so absurd that one wonders how the question can even be discussed; but it is discussed, and thoughtful people like Joseph Hergesheimer and Fannie Hurst seriously imply that all men, "at heart," prefer a fool.

For a woman, to venture to deny this may seem to lay her open to the charge that she doesn't know what she's talking about!

Yet all the same I shall deny it, because my respect for men will not allow such an aspersion on them to pass unchallenged.

Mt. Gilead Revival.

Rev. J. C. Zanders preached Sunday morning at the Mt. Gilead Baptist church, where a successful revival meeting is being held.

75,000 ABANDONED REFUGEES AT SMYRNA

Smyrna, September 21.—Although eight days have passed since fire obliterated Smyrna, 75,000 survivors remain exposed on the quay, destitute, distracted and abandoned. No allied vessel has offered to salvage this last wreckage of human life.

Nearly a dozen warships remain in the harbor but none show a disposition to aid the wretched population except the American destroyers. Deportations continue and Turkish soldiers are beginning to carry off the Greek and Armenian girls, leaving their parents in a frantic state.

Sporadic shooting and thefts continue. Smoke is still emerging from the ruins. The Turkish authorities explain that this is due to the burning of bodies. Dr. Wilfred Post, of New York, medical director of the Near East relief, has urged the Turks to bury their dead, in order to prevent pestilence. He also has appealed to them to vaccinate everyone, in order to guard against cholera and smallpox.

Interviewed by the Associated Press today, Dr. Post said:

"It is regrettable that the allied ships did not do more in salvaging human life. The work of all the vessels on the night of the fire was magnificent but on the succeeding days when the impulse of the great disaster disappeared there was a lull in their energy and spirit."

If we had kept up the work there would now be no evacuation problem, and thousands would have been saved which might otherwise have been killed. Even before the fire, there was indiscriminate killing and looting. There are so many bodies in the streets that I had, on one occasion, to alight from my automobile to lift the corpse out of the path of the car. No words can describe the fire as a spectacle.

"It was like a gigantic scene staged by Nero, or a chapter from Tamerlane. It was so vast and complete that it had every appearance of being malevolently planned in advance."

FOREIGN TRADE CLUB WILL MEET TONIGHT

An important business meeting of the Atlanta Foreign Trade club will be held in the directors' room of the chamber of commerce, Friday night, at 8 o'clock, according to announcement made by President Harry O. Mitchell.

A number of measures that are regarded not only of vital importance to the club's future but to the community will be discussed, among which are a revision of the constitution to permit of greater expansion of club activities in harmony with advancing local interest in foreign trade, the admission of women members, and the organization of group study sessions to take up courses in foreign languages, current economies, export technique and other subjects.

Buist C. Giesinger, chief of the south Atlantic office of the United States department of commerce, is announced as the speaker of the occasion.

STEWART CANDIDATE AS HOUSE SPEAKER

Waycross, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—It was learned here today from reliable sources that Charles E. Stewart, representative-elect from Atkinson county will be a candidate for the position of speaker of the house at the next session of the legislature.

Mr. Stewart has served two terms as representative from Coffee county and was recently elected to his second term from the new county of Atkinson.

Clouds of Gloom Envelop Friends Of Fiddlin' John

BY WILBUR BURTON.

Titus, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—Dark clouds of gloom that made the peaks of the Blue Ridge in Fannin county appear black instead of the traditional blue, were said to have settled over the citizens of those parts, where the famous Fiddlin' John Carson lives, when it was announced today that "Three Fingers" Pop" Tucker would enter the annual old fiddler's convention down in Atlanta on Friday and Saturday of next week.

"Three Fingers Pop," so-called because he lost one of his fingers on his right hand a few years ago, when one of his neighbors mistook him for a revenue officer, is a famous fiddler in this part of the mountains. In Towns county he has the reputation of being able "to shake the wickedest hip and wield the meanest bow" on a pine fiddle or anyone from Tucker's Cove to Tybee light.

He has never taken part in past fiddler's conventions here because his neighbors are quoted as saying the federal courts in that city frighten his otherwise fearless heart. But this year the old fiddler has determined to place personal considerations behind him and venture to Atlanta regardless of the results in order to win the fiddling championship of Georgia, and the $100 fiddle given as first prize to the winner of the fiddling contest in the Auditorium on Saturday evening of next week.

Residents of Towns county have no doubt that he will win, for didn't "Pop" fiddle old John Carson out of his job as a fiddler? He was a barn dance up in Peavy's Cove in the famed Noontooty district of the Blue Ridge? In the opinion of local musical authorities, John Carson or Old Tanager or any of the other hundred of fiddlers who will enter the contest will appear to be the merest of amateurs when "Pop" starts tuning up his battered old fiddle.

Jonas Tribble, well-known lawyer of Towns county, is in charge of "Pop" who will be a sort of "dark horse" in the convention, and in order to prevent the wily Carson from challenging his right to play, the Hon. Tribble has already paid "Pop's" entry fee, and registered him with Virgil Shepherd, secretary of the Georgia Old Fiddler's association.

"I'll wager my grandfather's plug hat that John Carson and his supporters felt like 30 cents when they learned that John would have to play against 'Pop' this year," declared Mr. Tribble. "I look for John to try and get out of going to Atlanta this year on that account, but we are not going to let him unless he deliberately allows himself to be arrested to prevent playing against 'Pop.' I've heard him and 'Pop' play, and 'Pop' may be a dark horse now, but when the convention is over he'll be the fiddling champion of Georgia. Mark my word on that!"

CAPPER-FINCHER BILL SIGNED BY PRESIDENT

Washington, September 21.—The Capper-Fincher bill, providing for regulation of trading in futures on grain markets was signed today by President Harding.

The new act which becomes effective November 1, was passed by congress as a sub for the regulatory provisions of the future trading act of 1921, which provisions were declared in operation by the supreme court. It follows along the same lines as the act of 1921, except that it is based on the power of congress to regulate interstate commerce while the statute to which the supreme court found objection was predicated on the taxing power of congress.

Grain exchanges coming under the new act are those at Chicago, Minneapolis, Duluth, Kansas City, St. Louis, Toledo, Milwaukee, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Baltimore.

Secretary Wallace, who as head of the department of agriculture, is entrusted with enforcement of the new law, declared in a statement issued after the president's signature had been affixed, that he expected cooperation "from legitimate dealers in grain and from all others who favor free, open and competitive markets."

"This does not interfere with hedging transactions on the boards of trade," said Mr. Wallace. "Neither does it interfere with ordinary speculation in the buying or selling of contracts for future delivery. If, however, there should be evidence of undue manipulation or attempts to corner the markets, or of the dissemination of false or misleading information about crop or market conditions by members of the exchanges, such conduct would be inquired into and promptly dealt with, as required by law. In addition, it prohibits the exchanges from observing or attempting to observe the operations of the other co-operative associations of grain producers who may desire membership in order to obtain use of the facilities of the grain exchanges. The secretary of agriculture also is given the requisite authority to examine the books and records of the members of the exchanges and to require such reports as may be necessary to carry out its provisions."

"The reports that this law will put the exchanges out of business or interfere with their legitimate functions are without foundation. It will not interfere with the proper operation of such exchanges."

Dr. S. L. Morris, D.D., secretary of the assembly's home missions; Burr Blackburn, secretary of the state welfare board; Mrs. Laura K. Campbell, who spent several years in Africa as a missionary, told of conditions in that country, and Mrs. W. A. Turner, president of the Atlanta Presbyterian, spoke.

Following luncheon an original pageant was given, showing, in a concrete way, the work accomplished by the Presbyterian colored missions in Atlanta, Louisville, and Richmond.

ROTARY OFFICERS END CONFERENCE AT THOMASVILLE

Thomasville, Ga., September 21.—(Special).—The executive conference of the 38th district Rotary clubs adjourned here this afternoon after a most delightful meeting, attended by the presidents and secretaries of the clubs in Georgia and Florida comprised in the district.

The closing feature of the meeting and one much enjoyed, was the luncheon today given by the local club at Greenwood, the winter home of Farnes Whitney, of New York, and under the charge of Fred Loveless, superintendent of the estate.

The meeting this morning was called to order at 9 o'clock and the business of the conference was concluded. The Thomasville Rotary being voted thanks for its delightful entertainment.

Among those attending the conference were Governor Porter Pierpont, of Savannah; former District Governor John Turner, of Tampa; Julian Reynolds, president of Albany; Car Glover, president, Luther Harrell, secretary, of Americus; Bill Culler, past president, of Athens; Tom Law, past president, Wayne Kell, secretary, of Atlanta; Bill McGovern, president, of Marietta; Horace McDowell, president, of Moultrie; Charlie Tillman, secretary, of Wilkes; J. Ellsworth Hall, president, of Brunswick; Charles Brown, secretary, of Savannah; William Fulcher, president, of Waynesboro; Ed Jerger, president, of Bob Flowers, secretary, of Thomasville.

MEMORIAL TO RICE PLANNED BY CHURCH

A movement for a $25,000 building in memory of Dr. Theron H. Rice, founder of the Presbyterian churches of colored work in Atlanta, was launched at the fourth annual conference Wednesday at the Presbyterian church.

Dr. S. L. Morris, D.D., secretary of the assembly's home missions; Burr Blackburn, secretary of the state welfare board; Mrs. Laura K. Campbell, who spent several years in Africa as a missionary, told of conditions in that country, and Mrs. W. A. Turner, president of the Atlanta Presbyterian, spoke.

Armstrong's Linoleum for Every Floor in the House

The room you didn't know you had

OLD trunks and old or broken furniture are stored there now. Perhaps you have never tried to make it into a room. Maybe you do not know how a linoleum floor can begin to transform your attic.

With a floor of linoleum, a rug, window curtains and a little simple furniture, the attic becomes a pleasant place in which to read or work. A linoleum floor is quiet, and easy to clean, and the occasional use of a mop keeps it looking like new.

Armstrong's Linoleum is a colorful, durable material which lends brightness and dignity to any room. It is not expensive, and when properly laid makes a floor that is remarkably good-looking.

We have a little booklet, "Decorative Linoleum Floors," containing twenty-four color plates showing new and attractive designs. It will be sent free on request. You can take it to a store and show the merchant exactly what you want to see. He will also give you estimates of the cost of Armstrong's Linoleum put down in your home.

Armstrong's Linoleum Rugs

For people who live in apartments or who have houses on short leases and consequently do not wish to install permanent linoleum floors, Armstrong's Linoleum is also made in the form of bordered rugs. Thirty attractive patterns in four sizes from 6 x 9 feet to 9 x 12 feet.

A GOOD PLATFORM.

In his comment upon the result of the run-off primary in which Walter A. Sims was the successful candidate for mayor, he makes the emphatic declaration of his purpose to "treat all sects, creeds and nationalities alike, and to be mayor of the entire city."

This is a declaration on which any broad-minded, patriotic citizen can afford to stand, and any policy less liberal would not be worthy of the chief executive of Atlanta.

This statement is an augury of good will and good faith that means much for the city.

It is the more significant in that one of the campaign attacks made against the successful candidate for mayor was that he did not stand for the principles enunciated in the statement above quoted.

It is fair to Mr. Sims to say that during the campaign he declared his intention, if elected mayor, to assume the broad position outlined in his post-election statement.

The people have taken him at his word, and The Constitution has every confidence that the mayor-elect meant just what he said in declaring both before and after the election, that in so far as his power, in administering the affairs of the city, "all sects, creeds and nationalities will be treated alike."

This means that the day of intolerance in Atlanta is past and that our citizens will no longer be divided by appeals to bigotry, prejudice or passion.

It means that the sacred guarantee of the federal constitution that there shall be no discrimination on account of creed or nationality will be observed.

It means that the new mayor of Atlanta will seek to unite all elements in a forward-march movement for the welfare of the whole city.

The avowed policy of such an intention by the head of the incoming administration should, and no doubt will, receive the support of all elements.

Just so long as the new mayor "makes good" along that line he will merit the approval of every citizen who has the best interest of the city at heart. If he fails he will be condemned.

He goes into office backed by a long experience in the service of the city, the most notable feature of which was his bold stand to protect the city against the inroads of the bunco aggregation that sought to enslave itself here by brazenly assuming departmental functions.

Despite threats and intimidation Councilman Sims led in council the fight for the investigation that followed.

The report of the committee of which he was chairman was overwhelmingly sustained in the municipal elections a year ago, as it is in his elevation to the mayoralty.

A man with as good a record as that, backed by the liberal policy announced by him, can be trusted to lead a creditable administration.

And he will be trusted so long as he stands on that platform.

OUR DEBTS ABROAD.

According to a statement issued recently by the federal treasurer, foreign countries owe the United States government an aggregate of $10,102,252,000, which indebtedness was incurred during or since the World War. Accrued interest has increased the total to approximately $11,500,000,000.

The statement in detail shows the distribution of this indebtedness to be as follows:

Armenia, $1,959,000; Austria, $24,055,000; Belgium, $377,132,000; Cuba, $1,140,000; Czechoslovakia, $91,887,000; Estonia, $1,999,000; Finland, $3,281,000; France, $3,240,857,000; Great Britain, $4,135,815,000; Greece, $15,000,000; Hungary, $1,685,000; Italy, $1,648,000,000; Latvia, $5,132,000; Liberia, $26,000; Lithuania, $4,931,000; Nicaragua, $170,000; Poland, $135,662,000; Roumania, $36,128,000; Russia, $192,601,000; Serbia, $21,104,000.

Of the entire amount these countries owe us, $9,386,422,000 represents money loaned for war purposes; and the remainder of the principal covers relief loans and the sales of surplus war materials.

Nicaragua's debt, for example, is wholly for war material bought from us on credit, while Armenia, Austria, Hungary and Finland are indebted to us wholly on account of relief work.

The debts of Poland, Estonia and Czechoslovakia are entirely within those two classes.

None of these debtor countries is able at this time to pay what it owes us; but there is no justification for an assumption that any portion of this indebtedness is uncollectible.

All but a fractional part of it is owed by nations of Europe; and Europe is in no condition to pay its debts nor any part of them at this time; but what conditions will be five, ten or twenty years from now is a different proposition.

Great Britain, foremost among our debtors, has notified this government that she will make a substantial remittance, amounting to some millions of dollars, on October 1 of this year; and the chances are that in the course of time every dollar of the indebtedness due us, from Great Britain and from every other source, will be wiped out.

And the United States could materially help to that end—thereby helping itself as much as other nations—by co-operating with Europe in its efforts to get back "upon its feet."

BONUS AND BUNKUM.

In his reply to a spread-eagle speech in behalf of the soldiers' compensation act, delivered by Senator Reed, of Missouri, on the floor of the senate last Wednesday, John Sharp Williams, retiring senator from Mississippi, told the truth regarding the motives of those congressmen and senators who advocated and supported the bonus bill, when he said, in effect, that their foremost desire was to get votes for themselves rather than serve the best interests of the country.

He declared with characteristic vehemence that if it were true "that the bonus bill was for the benefit of those who looked into the mouths of the cannon, and who walked up the steps against the German artillery and infantry, there would be some reason in the attempt at eloquence made during the last five minutes of the speech of the senator from Missouri."

"But," he said, "it is not true." And he continued:

"This is a bill to give a bonus to something like four millions of men, over one-half of whom never faced a shot, over one-third of whom never went across the sea, one-fourth of whom never served outside of a military camp; about one-tenth of whom, men and women, were serving with shoulder straps in Washington departments, never got anywhere to illustrate their courage."

The senator asked the bonus bill advocates why they did not confine the scope of its proposed benefaction "to the men who faced fire, who, upon Flanders fields and France's fields, offered their breasts to gunshots."

"Why," he asked, "did you put them all in?" and, supplying the answer himself, he declared:

"Because you knew that if you confined it to the one million men who went back to the states a little bit over a million, you would not have gotten much consideration from the politicians."

That hits the nail squarely on the head!

In every speech that has been made by a senator or a congressman in behalf of this bill—and few of those running for re-election this fall have missed an opportunity either to speak for it or to get an undelivered speech in the Congressional Record by "leave to print" privilege—great stress has been laid upon "the heroism of the boys who faced death in the trenches."

And yet all of them—those who fought, those who spent the term of their enlistment in training camps at home, and those who served in bomb-proof swivel-chair jobs in Washington or elsewhere—were alike included on an equal footing, in this so-called "compensation act!"

It is true, of course, that the boys who did not "get across" were as willing to go, and equally as brave and as patriotic at heart as those who were put in the trenches and on the firing line.

But the same thing is true of other millions of men, young and old, who were not drafted at all.

All patriotic Americans, in fact, were ready and willing to do their full duty, whatever it might have been, in helping to win the war.

If the bonus bill had been limited in its application to the soldiers who were injured or incapacitated in the service the public would have approved it, but such a limitation would not have served the purpose of the politicians.

What they were after, was votes!

Senator Williams "called their hand," in an unanswerable manner.

Most of the pro-bonus oratory in congress has been political clap-trap demagoguery; and the all-inclusive bonus bill itself was pure political bunkum.

Breathing, Sleeping and Eating.

The most marvelous machine in this world is yours—your own body!

And yet the chances are that you appreciate it the least and know less about it than anything you own.

So long as nothing serious goes wrong, the body seems to be left to itself to shift its way the best it can. It is given only half enough real air, its food is carelessly selected and as carelessly eaten—and it is given rest only as a last resort.

No wonder so many useful men and women fall before the battle is half over!

J. Arthur Thomson, in his wonderful "Outline of Science," says that the ordinary desk worker usually gets about one-tenth of his lung power, and wonders how you could expect anything but an anaemic body from such treatment.

Red blood comes from oxygen. In a deep breath, says this same authority, you breathe a whole gallon of air, whereas the ordinary person takes but two quarts.

Get plenty of fresh air, both day and night—then watch the "roses" that every step brings into play. Separate muscles and the 300 muscles are given a healthy shaking up as you walk merrily along.

Thomson says that the first hour in the "beauty sleep"—that during that time the brain life is entirely suspended and the blood is busy feeding the tired muscles of the body. After that another day has arrived.

It is in eating, however, that we are either made or unmade. It was Horace who said: "Give us this day our daily bread, and give us the means of eating it with a good conscience."

If you did more of your duty, you would eat anything but a broken and chewed up bit of food.

His health returned and so great was his strength that in tests he defeated the strongest young men at Yale University. And he lived for nearly a quarter of a century longer!

Nature is very great. It has its own "police-men" self-appointed as guards for the safety of us all. When we swallow a mouthful of food, it goes through a passage 23 feet in length before all the useful qualities are extracted and sent through the blood to give us health and strength. Can't you imagine how great the return would be if you used care in the selection and eating of everything that went into this great canal? These same "police-men" could send a little on duty if you did more of your duty.

Here is some good advice: Breathe deeply, sleep much—mostly early in the night—and eat slowly and thoroughly.

And I miss my guess if you are not "healthy, wealthy, and wise!"

FOOD AND BABY TEETH.

A mother asks whether a baby's diet has anything to do with decaying teeth. Her baby, 2 years old, was raised on certified milk diluted with boiled water and modified with lime water and milk sugar. At present he takes the milk "almost clear," she says, and besides he takes an egg, sometimes two eggs every day, macaroni, potatoes and bread, but no meat of any kind. He drinks three pints of milk daily, and some castoria "when necessary."

That last item isn't food. It is admission that the baby's food is inadequate.

A healthy baby ought to have his milk, not "almost clear," but undiluted and unmodified by the eighth or ninth month of age, as a rule, and before the time he is a year old, at least. The baby should be given no mutton or chicken broth two or three times a week from the time he is six months old.

A healthy baby should take a teaspoonful or two at first, and gradually a little more, of a fresh vegetable each day, from his sixth month, the vegetable being thoroughly cooked and strained through a sieve. Perhaps this is the important item lacking in the regimen described by the mother of this two-year-old whose teeth are decaying. The vegetables furnish lime (calcium) salts, and the teeth are chiefly built of lime salts.

Whether a deficiency of vitamins in the regimen has any bearing on the decay of the teeth in this instance, I am unable to judge. Lack of vitamins in the diet of a baby is common. The vegetables furnish lime (calcium) salts, and the teeth are chiefly built of lime salts.

The mother says nothing about fruit juice or fruit pulp (cooked) in the baby's regimen. Bottle babies should always receive a few teaspoonfuls of one of these fruit juices or fruit pulp from the age of three or four months. Orange juice, peach juice, grape juice, tomato juice (fresh or canned tomato), apple juice, are all good. The baby, or perhaps least valuable of all, stewed prunes. After the tenth month cooked fruit pulp should be given. The baby should be given raw and only in the fresh state. This is another important source of vitamins which are so necessary for the normal nutrition of the body. A bottle baby, of course, a baby blessed with a 100 per cent mother needs nothing of the kind in addition to the milk of his mother. Nature's Peerless Baby food, for he gets from the breast all the vitamins he requires.

In amount of time in the ounce or two of time water often employed for modifying milk scarcely compensates for the lime deficiency of the average bottle baby's diet.

The baby unfortunately is often unjustly sentenced to the bottle as a lucky youngster indeed if he gets an adequate ration to grow on. Probably the best thing that the bottle baby is not so contented as the breast-fed youngster, for if he does make a notable like perfect contentment his food will bear, for they have no competition. The housewife will pay about twice as much for sugar because of the tariff on cutlery she uses in her kitchen and her dining room. She may safely charge practically every increase to the tariff.

Study the tariffs, and then enlist in the army of democratic voters.

Women and the Tariff

(From The Arkansas Gazette.)

There is no time better than the present for the recently enfranchised woman voter to do a bit of investigating as to why prices of the things she needs in her kitchen and her dining room and in every other room in her house have advanced or are due to advance within a short time. The investigation will teach her a lot about the tariff and how directly it affects her life. It is the Fordney-McCumber bill, soon to become a law, that will cause women to pay more for sugar and coffee, for linen and china, for tea and tacks, for woollens and silks, for gloves and stockings and for practically everything else they use.

When the heavy protective tariffs of the republicans stop or largely retard the flow of imports, the American consumer is charged all the traffic will bear, for they have no competition. The housewife will pay about twice as much for sugar because of the tariff on cutlery she uses in her kitchen and her dining room. She may safely charge practically every increase to the tariff.

CONGRESS EXPECTS TO ADJOURN TODAY

President Will Probably Attend Closing Hours. To Sign Deficiency Measure and Others.

Washington, September 21.—Final touches were given in congress today to last moment legislation and leaders predicted adjournment sine die tomorrow afternoon, releasing members for the election campaign until the prospective call by President Harding for a session about November 15.

The deficiency appropriation bill tonight was the only important bill on the republican leaders' program for passage before adjournment. This bill was passed today by the senate, and after the conference report tomorrow the adjournment gavel is due to fall. The house resolution arranging for adjournment to 2 o'clock was given today to Chairman Warren, of the appropriations committee, to present to the senate for adoption on completion of the deficiency bill.

Senate leaders were prepared to defer adjournment an hour or two longer, if necessary.

President Harding was expected to attend the closing hour of congress to sign the deficiency measure and other minor papers.

Postponement of action on two other important bills before the senate, the administration measure to loan $5,000,000 to Liberia and the Dyer anti-lynching bill, appeared to be certain. Republican leaders said that opposition would prevent votes being reached on both the bills.

TWO NEGROES HELD IN $1,150 ROBBERY

Lawrenceville, Ga., September 21.—(Special.)—Howard Jones, colored, was arrested last night as he stepped off the Seaboard accommodation at Terrell's crossing, one mile east of Lawrenceville, and is charged with the robbery of Charles M. Jackson, prominent farmer, last Friday night, when $1,150 was taken from under his pillow.

Will Jones, a brother of the man arrested, was locked in jail in connection with the crime.

Seven hundred and ninety-nine dollars of the stolen money has been recovered and the officers are searching for the balance.

GENERAL RICHARDS VISITS MARINE OFFICE

General George Richards, paymaster, U. S. M. C., inspected the offices of Col. H. C. Reisinger, finance officer for the marines, in the southeast, Wednesday afternoon, in the federal building.

The general, veteran of many campaigns and wearing decorations including the Legion of Honor, was accompanied by Pay Clerk Frank Mole, U. S. M. C. Both left for Washington Wednesday night.

'Made in Atlanta' Show Is Praised By Mrs. Inman

Urging Atlanta housewives who have not already done so to avail themselves of the educational opportunities presented by the "Made-in-Atlanta" exposition, Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, director for Georgia General Federation of Women's Clubs, Thursday gave out an interview commending the objects of the exhibition and expressing the conviction that the opportunities offered will result in a saving of money to the people who make proper use of the information being placed in their hands. Mrs. Inman is one of the most prominent club women not only in Atlanta, but in the country at large.

"If we women," she said, "by spending a little time at the city auditorium this week can learn of some home product that is made cheaper, and just as good quality as one made elsewhere, then we have the knowledge herewith to save money for ourselves—and that is helping the individual directly, and should prove of vital interest to everyone who has things to buy for a home."

"The American housewife is probably the largest buyer in the world. I dare say women buy more in Atlanta than the men of a city twice this large would buy. I see no reason why the merit of the goods displayed at the city auditorium this week should not create in the minds of the women a feeling that it is really popular to buy home manufactured goods where possible."

"In fact, I believe that a thorough understanding of what our great city produces should inspire a feeling of pride among the housewives that would practically solve the problem of making it the right thing to do, in their minds, to buy goods made as close home as possible. The show now going on presents a remarkable opportunity for one to become informed as to the real place we occupy as a manufacturing city, and if there are any housewives who have not been to the auditorium this week, or who have not planned to visit it, I think there is a chance for them to miss something very much worth while."

"I should be very much gratified if the 'Made-in-Atlanta' show should continue to prove an immense success."

ATLANTA CHURCH NORMAL SCHOOL TO OPEN TUESDAY

The opening session of the Atlanta Church Normal school will be held Tuesday evening, at 7:15 o'clock when Rev. W. Ainsworth Jonnard, of Savannah, field worker in the department of religious education for the Seawanean conference of the Episcopal church, will conduct two special courses on "The Principles of Teaching" and "Church School Administration."

This is the first of a series of meetings which will be held on the fourth Thursday of each month at Eggleston hall in the interest of religious education. Special courses will be offered in teacher training, and grade conferences will be held on the various courses of the Christian Nurture series, which is being adopted all over the United States as the standard church school course of the Episcopal church.

Among the instructors will be Mrs. J. G. Throver, Miss Mary Christian, Miss Leonora Walker, Miss Maud Steedman, Miss Helen Hargrave, Mrs. J. H. Hoke, of Decatur; A. H. Thomas, Rev. Hiram K. Douglas, of St. Luke's church, and Rev. A. G. Richardson, pastor of the Church of the Incarnation, West End.

W. D. UPSHAW WILL BE RENOMINATED AT MEETING TODAY

Congressman W. D. Upshaw will be formally nominated to succeed himself as congressman from the fifth district at a meeting of the fifth district congressional committee which will be held in the senate chamber at the capitol at 11 o'clock Friday morning. The district is composed of Rockdale, DeKalb, Fulton, Douglas and Campbell counties.

After the committee disposes of its business at the capitol the members will be entertained at a luncheon given in their honor at the Kimball house by Congressman Upshaw.

Following is a list of the members of the committee: Fulton County—Delegates, Carl Copeland, Atlanta; Walter McElreath, Atlanta; Albert Howell, Jr., Atlanta; Thomas S. Shipper, Atlanta; Mrs. Lena Cox, Hapeville; Harry Cohen, Atlanta; Alternates, John McEachern, Atlanta; Mrs. E. N. Gibbs, Atlanta; Jason Jacobs, Atlanta; J. J. Burber, Atlanta; G. E. Collins, Atlanta; Charles H. Girardeau, Atlanta. DeKalb County—Delegates, E. F. Tuggle, J. Howell Greer, B. A. Boyette, Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, Decatur; Judge B. J. Simpson, Tucker; Stone Mountain, Alternates, R. H. Tribble, J. B. Bond, Lithonia; J. S. Sasser, Edgewood; Rev. R. Floyd, Roswell; Mrs. H. C. Gattrell, Decatur; Judge E. C. White, Lithonia. Campbell County—Delegates, James Reid, Fairburn; Charles Moseley, Palmetto. Alternates, Rev. M. D. Collins, Fairburn; Joe Nicholson, Fairburn. Douglas County—Delegates, J. R. Hutchison, Douglasville; J. P. Little, Little Springs, Alternates, Z. T. Duke, Douglasville; G. N. McElarty, Villa Rica. Rockdale County—Delegates, E. D. Hewlette, A. F. Walker, Conyers, Alternates, R. G. Gaffey, Conyers; Fred Morrow, Milledgeville.

City Committee Meets.
A meeting of the hospital and charity committee of city council is scheduled for 4 o'clock Friday afternoon at Grady hospital to discuss a number of important matters.

FALL REALTY BOOM ON, SAY LOCAL EXPERTS

The fall real estate boom is now on, in the opinion of a number of the real estate men in Atlanta. This opinion is based on the fact that a number of deals, both leases and sales, are now being negotiated, and it is expected that important transactions will be made public before the end of this week.

Probably the most important deal reported Thursday was the transfer of a lot on Ivy street, from Ben J. Massey, to Frank and May Lowenstein, the consideration being reported in the neighborhood of $45,000. This property was at one time bought for the purpose of erecting a Shrine temple. It fronts 100 feet on Ivy street and is 200 feet long.

Building activity is showing up well for the month, and indications are that September will very nearly, if not quite, come up with the record of August, when building costs in Atlanta tallied one thirty-seventh of all permits issued in 16 northern states.

SUPREME COURT URGED TO AFFIRM COART SENTENCE

In a brief filed with the supreme court Thursday, Attorney General George M. Napier urges that both to affirm the life sentence imposed on Major L. H. Court, of Camp Benning, who was convicted in the Talbot superior court of killing A. R. McNiece, Talbotton school official, and sentenced to life imprisonment. The killing occurred at Talbotton in October last year. The trial of Major Court attracted statewide attention.

At the trial in Talbotton attorneys for the defense contended that Major Court was justified in shooting McNiece and also contended that McNiece had made improper advances to Mrs. Court.

The brief was prepared by Attorney General Napier and Assistant Attorney General Seward M. Smith. A review of the case is given and the supreme court is urged to uphold the life sentence imposed by the lower court in the case.

GOODE AND BAD ENLIST THURSDAY IN MARINE CORPS

John B. Goode and William H. Bad, two full-blooded Indians from Oklahoma, were accepted at the Atlanta marine recruiting station Thursday, according to Captain George Bowyer, U. S. M. C. They were the only ones out of seven applicants to pass the examinations.

"We have a Captain Best in the marine corps," said Captain Bowyer, "and in his company there is a Private Wurst. Wouldn't it be an odd coincidence if Goode and Bad should also be placed in his charge?"

The Best is none too Goode for the marine corps, and though some recruits may be Bad, the Wurst can be made into fighting men at Parris Island.

Judge J. H. Tucker, commander of Evan P. Howell camp, United Confederate Veterans, received an interesting contribution to the state museum Thursday when he was presented with a piece of wood cut from the childhood home of Stonewall Jackson at Clarksburg, W. Va.

The piece of wood was cut from the house in which General Jackson, the famous Confederate leader, was born. It was presented to Judge Tucker by O. G. Radabaugh, of Clarksburg.

Recently Mr. Radabaugh visited the state museum at the capitol and when shown over the museum by Judge Tucker he said he would send this interesting relic to Georgia. The package arrived Thursday and Judge Tucker put it on display in one of the show cases.

SCHOOL OF COMMERCE HAS BIG ATTENDANCE

There will be no registration at the Tech School of Commerce Saturday evening, but beginning Monday evening, the registration will continue until the opening of the school on September 27.

A record enrollment is expected in this year's classes, for each term shows a marked increase in the number of students who wish training in the higher branches of business. The increased facilities will be taxed to handle the applicants for this term for a number of new courses have been added and several new instructors engaged.

The courses in advertising and salesmanship have been preferred by the majority of students enrolling during the past week. The whole branch of advertising is covered by these courses which purpose to give the student a wide grasp of advertising fundamentals, actual experience in investigating merchandising problems and handling agency accounts and the preparation of copy.

Accounting, which will train its students from book keeping through the intricacies of income tax problems to the final preparation for C. P. A. examinations, is another course that has proved most popular. Courses in commercial law, finance, business and industrial management are among others offered by Tech's evening classes.

ADDRESS IS WANTED OF LONNIE RADCLIFF

The address of Lonnie J. Radcliff, formerly of Columbia, S. C., is being sought by the Anti-Tuberculosis association. The association wishes to return to him some valuable papers, which helped to obtain his release from the Fulton tower, where he was held on a charge of possessing a ticket for a suit of clothes which had been stolen and pawned. He proved that he secured the ticket from a second party without knowing of the theft and was, therefore, given his freedom by the court.

Gassed and otherwise disabled during the early part of the war, his honorable discharge from the British army is among the papers which the association held for him during his stay in the tower.

The office of the Anti-Tuberculosis association is at 23 East Cain street. Anyone having knowledge of Lonnie J. Radcliff's present location is urged to report at this office.

SAVANNAH GETS NEXT VETERINARY MEETING
Albany, Ga., September 21.—Savannah was selected as the next convention city of the Georgia State Veterinary association and officers were elected by the association, which concluded a two-day session here this afternoon.

Georgia Women Of Past Decades To Be Honored

The names of twenty-five Georgia women of other decades who earned for themselves through their greatness a prominent place in the history of the state, will be immortalized on the tablet in the Temple of Womanhood to be erected in Washington, D. C., by the Women's Universal alliance.

A special historical research committee of 100 will be appointed for the state, whose duty it will be to select for posterity the names most representative of the greatness of Georgia womanhood.

A prize of $50 will be awarded the person selecting the most appropriate list of names. No women now living are eligible for the list.

The research committee includes: Henry D. McDaniel, Mayor; T. J. Simmons, Gainesville; Henry E. Harmon, East Lake; R. H. Powell, Valdosta; Marie C. Omdier, Savannah; C. B. Gibson, Seaford; Cora M. Harris, Rydal; Eliza P. Andrews, Rome; J. H. Macpherson, Milledgeville; Miss Lily H. Hammond, Madison; A. P. Montague, Macon; Sandy Beaver, Gainesville; F. A. Gaines, Decatur; E. T. Holmes, Hartselle; L. B. Evans, Augusta; Gertrude C. Whitney, Augusta; Mildred L. Rutherford, Athens; P. E. Jenkins, Demorest; the Rev. D. C. Harrow, Athens; William S. Cox, College Park; Mrs. William C. Vereen, Moultrie; Mrs. Mrs. E. Land, Cordele; Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, Athens.

Officials of the great women contest, Women's Universal alliance, 1519 New Hampshire avenue, Washington, D. C., will furnish complete details to anyone interested in the contest.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week Julia Takes Her Chance

BY CONCORDIA MERRELL

Next Week, "The Great Prince of Shan"
By E. Phillips Oppenheim

I looked down at the letters in my hand. So, these advertisements were for me, and they'd run into good news knows how much! I stared and stared, and felt myself sort of going solid and solid. Somehow, this didn't seem a good beginning for a joke.

"I suppose advertising is—is very expensive these days?" I managed to say.

"I resent those, because they never ought to have been necessary. One doesn't begrudge money if it's for anything within reason, but I'm hanged if I can see the force of chucking it away for a silly girl's cowardly whim! After all, I've done what I could."

"You mean about these?" and I slightly lifted the letters.

"Oh, no," he said. "I must confess, those are an irritation, but the other was my obvious duty and I am glad enough to do it; only she ought to realize that I've done what I could."

"The other... the other?" I faltered.

He shifted slightly.

"It isn't a thing I've told anyone about, Miss Graham, only with you..." He paused.

"The other?" I questioned again.

Little by little the truth came trickling through to my congealing brain, until, finally, I knew and understood.

He told me that, two years ago, the legacy I'd had from my father in the shape of investments, which by a condition of the will must remain untouched, had been lost in one of the big financial failures that the war brought, and that I'd had not a penny left.

That made me catch a breath, you may imagine. Not a penny left! But my interest had been paid just the same, and I'd drawn a big sum from my capital for my trousseau expenses. Then what? How?

"Then... then how has she lived? Where has her... money come from?" I asked faintly, trying to show only an outsider's interest in the financial troubles of Miss Grey.

"Well, naturally, I couldn't let that happen," he said. "Her father was my father's oldest friend and all that sort of thing... Besides... one couldn't let such a thing... Oh, it was nothing, anyway," he broke off.

He'd paid it himself! For two years Nicholas Penticott had been paying my little income, and he it was who supplied the money for my trousseau.

From miles away, it seemed, his disgruntled voice came to me. "To go and disappear in this hysterical way! Really, she ought to be made to realize that such things are beyond a joke."

Beyond a joke? I should rather say so!

And I couldn't even tell him who I was now. I couldn't—it would be such a wretched start. For not only did I owe him all that money, but he considered me a wretched, thoughtless, selfish thing, all on the spur of a "cowardly whim."

"She's always been a load on my mind," he said, after a little silence. "Ping, ping! sent out the clock, and made us both jump."

Half-past ten!

My joke! Ah, where was it? "Ask of the winds, and all that sort of thing, for believe me there was not the smallest trace of a joke in my heart at this moment."

Again, from miles away, my guardian's voice came through to me. "Now, I hope to goodness she's going to be in time," he muttered, and after another longish pause:

"It will be the last straw if she doesn't turn up after all. Because I've got Lord Henry coming up in about ten minutes, specially to see her. I arranged it on the phone last night after speaking to her."

Lord Henry!

I stood petrified, rooted to the spot. Lord Henry coming here! But—he's my guardian, and to one he'd give me away. I certainly didn't want the truth to come out that way. What could I do? What could I say? Where could I go and hide? As in a dream my guardian's voice went on:

"Lord Henry wants to offer her a part in a new play he's interested in. A part, he says, no one could take so well as Julia Grey. It's hers for the asking, if she'll only turn up."

Listen! Who's that?

The sound of someone approaching. I knew only too well that it couldn't be Julia Grey. The chances were, then, that it was Lord Henry.

Lord Henry knew me at once, but like the dear, intuitive friend he was, got the feeling from my eyes and did not give me away. My guardian gave me some thing to do and I left the two men together.

A moment later I stood before the two men, feeling a good deal like "the accused" facing a couple of judges.

"Perhaps you would explain to Miss—er—began Harry, rising as I entered.

"Certainly, if you'd rather," said my guardian, leaning back against his big desk. "I told you, Miss Graham, that Lord Henry Penticott was anxious to find my ward, Miss Grey, in order to offer her a part in the new play he is interested in."

"Yes, you told me," I replied, my lips feeling dry and unwilling because I felt Harry's eyes were on my very pink face.

"Well, Miss Grey hasn't turned up, and it's just 11. Time is getting short."

"Yes," broke in Harry. "We hope to start rehearsals the end of next week. Monday week, at least."

"I see," I said, not seeing at all, and wondering what on earth it was all leading to.

My guardian turned to me, smiling slightly.

"Lord Henry has asked me to suggest that you might—well, briefly, he thinks you are exactly the type he requires, and wonders whether you'd care to try your hand at playing the part. Er—would you, Miss Graham?"

"Oh!" I cried, utterly taken aback, and amazed. I hadn't remotely foreseen this.

Nicholas Penticott seemed a good deal satisfied with my amazement; it was perfectly genuine, but didn't quite spring from the cause he imagined.

"Yes, I hinted to Lord Henry that I scarcely thought you altogether cut out to be an actress, temperamentally, I mean," he said.

"And I can't act now, and never will be able to," went singing through my head, and I only just kept my just managed not to, and Harry self from laughing hysterically.

"Don't let his gloomy view influence you, Miss Graham. He said much the same to Julia Grey once, I saved me by laughing himself."

My guardian joined in the laugh against himself.

"Perhaps it is that I don't want to lose the very best secretary I ever had. Well, hang it! You can hardly expect me to be enthusiastic about that, can you?" he said, looking at me with his frank, friendly eyes.

"No, it's very rough on you, I admit, that Miss Graham should be— if she will forgive a personal remark—much the same type as Miss Grey."

"Oh, Harry! You utter wretch! I simply had to risk offending you," he added. "I hope the suggestion doesn't offend you, though?"

The question was addressed to Julia Grey, not to Jane Graham.

"I think it was most awfully kind of you to offer me the chance. I hope you realize that I am very, very grateful."

I raised my eyes to his as I spoke, and saw that he understood.

"Then the question is entirely up to you, Miss Graham," said my guardian.

"Then—I'd like to try—the the part, please," I said, stammering a little.

"What! You mean you'll take it?" cried my guardian in a tone of almost comic dismay.

"Oh, will it be dreadfully inconvenient to you?" I asked, with a horrible little ache feeling at the thought of leaving him in the lurch.

"No, no, of course not! I didn't mean that at all. Please don't consider me," he said hastily, his good looking face flushing slightly.

Not consider him! As if I could help it.

There was still heaps of work to do; I knew that. And yet... I must make that money... I thought distractedly. I was never so torn in my life. If it hadn't been for the importance of the money, I'd have turned Harry's offer down flat, and been happy to do it.

Harry was eager to clinch matters and get away from a situation that might at any moment become very awkward for him.

"I hoped you might be able to come along with me, and see Barclay about the part. I don't want him to settle with anyone else."

"In that case, you'd better get ready at once, Miss Graham," said my guardian. "You won't wait any longer for Miss Grey?" he added, turning to Harry.

"Do you think it is much good?" gravely inquired Harry.

"Quite frank, judging by her erratic conduct, I think probably it isn't," said Nicholas Penticott dryly.

"And as I promised to see Barclay at 11:30, bringing either Miss Grey, or, at least news of her, with me—"

"Yes, exactly; then you haven't much time, Miss Graham."

Oh, how perfectly calmly he said it! If it hadn't been for that sudden tone of dismay a few sentences earlier that was still ringing in my ears, I might have thought that he didn't care a twopenny jot who his secretary was.

I fled into the other office to get my things on, and had put on my hat and was struggling into my coat when my guardian followed.

He gave me a hand with my coat in an absent sort of way, and then said very earnestly:

"Please don't think me interfering, but are you sure that you are wise in doing this?"

"I don't know about being wise," I replied, a little wildly, "but I've just got to do it."

"Got to?" he echoed puzzled.

"I mean—that is, I've always longed to make a career for myself on the stage."

Which was a perfectly veracious statement of my feelings up to this very minute, but now, Nicholas Penticott standing before me looking at me with goodness only knows—I wonder if he knew himself—what mixture of meanings in his eyes—well now, I simply knew that all I wanted to do in the whole world was to stay right here in the office, working for him, helping him, being with him. And if it hadn't been for that miserable money question that stood so gauntly between us I believe I'd have blurted all this out then and there.

But I must do something to settle that question first—I must.

"Really?" his voice came to me through the tangle of my thought.

"I don't know if you felt anything of the kind. But, you know, it might be possible to feel all that and still have no talent for acting, mightn't it?"

"Yes—oh yes! Of course it might."

"And the stage, unless you really are marked out for such a career is—well, it's a wretched business, always that."

"Yes, but I don't mean to be third-rate—I mean to be the very best."

He didn't quite look at me as he broke in, saying:

"I don't care for the idea of a stage career for any girl I like."

The utter dear!

"You've been happy here, haven't you?" he demanded abruptly.

"Awfully happy. It isn't that a bit," I assured him.

"Then suppose—I don't mean to be a wet blanket, but just suppose you should fail to impress Pelman Barclay this morning, will you come back to me?"

I looked up smiling to thank him, but the smile faded and the thanks faltered, for there in his eyes, was that odd little look again; that look that had the power to make my heart extra hop. I lowered my eyes quickly.

"Jove, but I hate losing you!" he broke out suddenly. "I do, really!"

I pulled myself together severely. The odd little look was for a satisfactory secretary—not for me. "If I should actually get this part, there used to be a girl at the Stannore offices who'd be just as competent a secretary as myself."

His face changed. He reddened, and looked like a big bulky boy, and growled out: "Competence be damned, and the girl, too!"

So—so it wasn't only—I wasn't just—it wasn't only, what wasn't it? I didn't dare to stop to think. I just rushed ahead as quickly as I could. It was so very hard to feel any real enthusiasm for a stage career just at that moment.

"And I mean to get on! Right to the very tip-top. I believe I have talent, and I mean to make good," I said, fearing that in another moment

"I—I'm not absolutely certain to the very last penny, but it must be three or four hundred pounds," I faltered, fearing that in another moment you don't understand! I couldn't—indeed I couldn't! I stammered out, scarcely knowing what I said.

"Besides," I ended weakly. "It wouldn't be any good."

"I can't see the force of that," he said. "My Warren Fishers are of the same ever-reducing value as any-hurt. I felt my eyes fill stinging. "I—I couldn't think such a thing of you. You ought to know that I couldn't," I cried, my voice shaking.

"And—oh, I'd better go quickly!" And turned blindly and went toward the door.

The sound of quick steps, a hand on my shoulder, and a voice shaking like my own as it said:

"Jane!"

I was turned forcibly round so that I faced by guardian, but I kept my eyes down, not daring to look at him.

"No, I didn't mean that. I'm sorry. I didn't think you'd think that of me," he said jerkily.

"Just don't go, though. Just stay with me always. Just give me the right to help you. Just—just marry me, will you, Jane?"

Mrs. Mary Lind, of Phenix City, Ala., feels confident that she can secure good dental treatment in Atlanta and that it is worth while to come all the way from her home town to this city to have her teeth treated. She did this and is now satisfied.

went to the One-Price Dental office at 104 1-2 Whitehall street, corner of Mitchell. This dental concern made her a set of teeth for $10. They have worn so well and she is so well pleased with them that nearly two years later she wrote a letter of appreciation to the One-Price Dental Office. This visit from a person living in Alabama to Atlanta for dental work is no new thing. It is well known that good work at lower prices can be got in Atlanta than in most other towns in the South. People from all over the South come to Atlanta for dental work.

Alabama come to the One-Price Dental Office for dental work and find that it pays them to do so. All work guaranteed ten years. Prices always the same.—(adv.)

Atlantans to Organize Local Sulgrave Branch

An Atlanta committee of the Sulgrave Institution is to be organized today, as a result of the visit in Atlanta this week of the distinguished Britishers and Americans forming the 1922 mission.

Major James L. Key calls the organization meeting, which will be held in his office at 3:30 o'clock.

Miss Ethel Armes, of New York, executive secretary of the American committee, who accompanied the mission to Atlanta, remained over in this city and will present to this afternoon's meeting the usual plan of organization and the program of the Sulgrave Institution.

The membership includes already some of America's most distinguished men and women in letters, science, the arts, and in public office.

Its program which looks primarily to the cultivation of international friendships, especially among the English-speaking nations, will work through such methods as the establishment of exchange professors in universities, the publications of works of historical and reference or memorial value, the marking of historic events, and cultivation of friendship between nations through such contracts as the present Sulgrave tour encourages.

Preliminary Meeting.
A preliminary meeting looking to the organization of an Atlanta committee was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert F. Maddox, when two important plans were proposed. One was that the men and women in Atlanta who are interested should form a joint committee to work together, instead of separate committees, this idea is the result of the interest manifested both by men and women.

The other suggestion, which was made by Mrs. Robert C. Alston, was that the new committee should not only celebrate Washington's birthday as Sulgrave Manor day, but should build up sentiment for a popular observance.

Mrs. R. V. Connerat, who has recently returned from England, where she visited Sulgrave Manor and studied the institution at its headquarters, described interestingly the beautiful shrine which has been made of this home of Lawrence Washington, founder in the sixteenth century of Sulgrave in Northamptonshire, and ancestor of George Washington.

Miss Ethel Armes, executive secretary of the American committee, conducted the meeting and made happy reference to the appropriateness of holding the inspiration meeting for so constructive a mission. She also referred to the appropriateness of the institution in the home of Robert F. Maddox, son of one of the south's ablest builders after the civil war, whom she has personally known as a Birmingham girl, when he had given her valuable information and suggestions in the compilation of her book on the history of coal and iron, which she published several years ago.

Mrs. Lamar and Mrs. Peter Mel-drum, of Savannah, are the two Georgia members of the governing board of Sulgrave in America.

Those present at the meeting yesterday at Mrs. Maddox's home were: R. V. Connerat, Mrs. Hunt Chipley, Mrs. Joseph P. Lamar, Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, Mrs. R. C. Alston, Mrs. R. V. Connerat, Mrs. Hunt Chipley, Maddox, Mrs. John Grant, Mrs. John E. Orter, Mrs. Robert Harvey, Mrs. Welborn, Mrs. Hollins Randolph, Mrs. John M. Slaton.

Bessie Tift Alumnae Gives Pretty Luncheon

The members of the Atlanta chapter, Bessie Tift alumnae, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Georgian Terrace, covers being laid for Mrs. Roy Calhoun, president; Mrs. Norman Coolidge, Mrs. Mary Peoples Coolidge, Mrs. Alice Turner, Mrs. Louis D. Newton, Mrs. Harry Faust, Mrs. John D. Tiller, Mrs. J. M. Cox, Miss Margaret Moncrieff, Miss Grace Garner, Miss Tommie Lee Davis, Miss Grover Mangham, Mrs. B. F. Johnson, Mrs. Ruth Jenkins, Miss Florence Stevens and Mrs. John Carter.

Mrs. Roy Calhoun made an address of welcome, and presided over the business part of the occasion, while Mrs. John Carter read the constitution and by-laws, which were unanimously adopted by the alumnae.

The chapter will work directly under the parent organization and will be one of the chapters to help financially in building the new dormitory.

The decorations of the luncheon table were a basket filled with golden hued dahlias, the basket tied with blue tulle, to carry out the college colors of blue and yellow.

An interesting feature of the occasion was the talk given by Mrs. Alice Turner who graduated from the college 52 years ago.

Mrs. Stewart Will Head Lee St. P.-T. A.

Mrs. Andrew P. Stewart was elected to succeed Mrs. D. L. Therrell as president of Lee Street Parent-Teacher association at the meeting held Thursday afternoon at the school, at which 158 members of the club were present.

The other officers elected were Miss Azzie Simpson, vice president; Mrs. A. J. Stewart, secretary, and Mrs. J. P. Wilkerson, treasurer.

Mrs. Stewart did not appoint any committees for the new year at this meeting, but will announce her program at the next regular meeting.

Mrs. Therrell, the retiring president, has been most successful in her leadership of Lee Street P.-T. club, which has one of the largest membership lists in Atlanta.

Rehearsal and Synopsis Of Fashion Show of 1922

The rehearsal for the "Fashion show of 1922" will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the auditorium of the Atlanta Woman's club.

Fifty beautiful models selected from Atlanta's young society women will act as the French models for the show, which will be given at the Auditorium on the evenings of September 28 and 29, the proceeds accruing therefrom to be used for the benefit of the Woman's auxiliary of the bedside educational fund of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children.

Box Holders.
Mrs. Edgar Paulin and Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman, co-chairmen of the committee on boxes, announce that the six seated boxes are $24, while those seating four will be sold for $16, for the two evenings, with a change in the program for the second performance. There will be no matinee.

Among those who have made reservations Dr. and Mrs. Phineas Calhoun, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Elias, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Inman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gregg, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Broyles, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adair, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Riley, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Dowdell Brown, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Robert, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Hinman, Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Paulin, Mrs. Teresa Zahn and Willard McBurney.

The entire production is to be staged and directed by James La Vire, who has devoted the past three months in rounding out and perfecting his plans, and presented by J. P. Allen & company.

Synopsis Given.
The first episode will represent an old-fashioned garden, bordered with an ivy-covered stone wall, offset by three gateways, and carpeted with velvety grass. Wonderful cypress trees ornamented in various attractive shapes make an effective background, while in the center of a six-foot square hedge there will be a stone fountain. White marble benches and a sundial complete this realistic garden scene, in which Miss Blanche Divine, wearing the exquisite old-fashioned gown worn by Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through," will be shown in the pale moonlight. She will serve to introduce the twenty-two modern girls, wearing afternoon gowns and hats, who will promenade before seating themselves on the marble benches, so as to match the interpretative dance number executed by pupils of Mrs. William Cloer Souder.

The grand promenade will follow on the eight-foot run-way, which will extend from the center of the stage to the very last row in the auditorium. It will be brilliantly illuminated and can be seen from every seat in the house.

Episode II is to be a ball room scene, done in old rose and gold. At the back of the stage the grand stairway of Italian marble leads to a platform at the back of which is a beautiful Gainesboro painting, ten by ten feet. A crystal chandelier, an exact copy of the one at the white house, will light this scene, where the walls will be hung in rich old rose brocade, and the doorways outlined in gold.

The "Blue Danube" waltz will be played by the orchestra, and will be danced by the girls gowned in stunning evening costumes, their escorts wearing the regulation evening suits.

A handsome bride, her identity disclosed Tuesday evening, gowned in robes befitting a royal princess, will serve as her flower girl, little Miss Jacquelin Moore. Lohengrin's wedding march will be played to bring the bride on the stage.

Episode III is a beach scene wherein the curtain rises upon a restless, opalescent sea, with an ocean liner aglow with lights, and a brightly illuminated hotel lending atmosphere. A Lincoln and Peerless sport model, their headlights thrown far up the beach, will be driven by smart looking girls wearing sport clothes and knickers. The bathing beauties will add a very colorful note to the act.

Mrs. Robert Gregg, chairman of the ticket committee for the entertainment, has placed the tickets on sale for Friday and Saturday at Cole Book company, Mrs. Percy Adams, chairman; Cone Drug store, Whitehall street, Mrs. Frank Sprattlin, chairman; Cone Drug store, Peachtree street, Mrs. Ben Watkins, chairman; J. P. Allen company, Mrs. Robert Martin, chairman; Georgian Terrace, Mrs. Martin Dunbar, chairman; Piedmont hotel, Mrs. J. C. Harris, Jr., chairman; Nunnally's, Whitehall street, Mrs. Frank Boland, chairman; Nunnally's, Peachtree street, Mrs. E. L. Carnay, chairman; Huyler's, Mrs. Guy Mitchell, chairman.

Each ticket will cost $1, and can be reserved at Cable Piano company, on Saturday, September 23; Monday, September 25, and Tuesday, September 27.

Artistic Needlework of Miss Mays Brings Her National Recognition

Photographs by Tornello, of New York.

Actresses in the Greenwich Village Follies, posed in jade green lingerie, designed by Miss Laura Mays, of Marietta, who has been selected to edit two pages in the Mallinson's Blue Book, a publication which goes all over the country. Miss Mays also designed the child's dress, which is finished with a great deal of handwork.

Through her remarkable ability and needle creations, Miss Laura Mays, of Marietta, has been selected to edit two full pages in Mallinson's Blue Book, with attractive illustrations accompanying each sketch, the magazine reaching thousands of people throughout the United States. Pictures of children's clothes, lamp shades, negliges and lingerie for women, appear on these two pages.

To reside in the south and qualify to foretell in the fall what fabrics and styles will form the general silhouettes for children in the springtime, is indeed most wonderful, and yet, that is exactly what Miss Mays can prophesy, just as she can sense the same elusive subject for the fall season, at least six months ahead of the season's schedule.

Miss Mays had no letter of introduction to present to this silk firm in order to serve as a stepping stone to success, but went alone and unheralded to their Fifth Avenue office in New York, and was interviewed by Mrs. Carolyn Trowbridge Cadno-Lewis, who at once recognized the remarkable talent and personality of this Georgia girl, and engaged her marvelous services for the blue book.

Della Vanna, one of the principals in the Greenwich Village Follies, posed in the bloomers and silk shirt for the above photograph. Jade green Pussy Willow was employed in the fashioning thereof, and trimmings of val lace, together with exquisite ribbon and hand-work lend an effective finish to the lingerie.

Silk and handwork in artistic combination, form the dress for a little girl, augmented by the original touch in ribbon and lace, which only Miss Mays' ingenious turn of mind can supply. Definite plans for a layette in Pussy Willow silk have been outlined for an order made through Katharine M. H. Marshall, of New York, a prominent distributor, who has added Miss Mays' name to her card, and who is seen by appointment only, at her 52nd Street shop.

Many offers have come to Miss Mays to reside in New York, and to identify herself with large and established firms, in order to create needlework for the exclusive sale of one emporium. However, she prefers, and does remain at her home in Marietta, meager her needle workshop with skill, gives it a charming personal touch, and makes her distinctive talent known in the four corners of the country.

A new series of postage stamps just issued in Austria bears the likenesses of eminent Austrian musical composers, including Mozart, Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert and Strauss.

Miss Powell Gives Bridge For Visitor

Miss Frances Powell gave a lovely bridge tea Thursday afternoon at her home, complimenting three lovely brides-elect of October. Miss Louise Campbell, Miss Annie Hart and Miss Lula Groves Campbell and to Miss Persis Bond, of Fort Wayne, Ind., the guest of Miss Louise Campbell.

Zinnias, asters and other bright garden flowers decorated the rooms where the game was played.

In the dining room the lace covered tea table had, as a centerpiece, a graceful basket of garden flowers.

The honor guests were presented lovely dainties. Top score prize was a hand-painted bridge pad and consolation a French novelty.

Mrs. Arthur Powell, who assisted her daughter in entertaining, wore a handsome gown of black canton crepe.

Miss Powell was lovely in black crepe de chine.

Besides the honor guests, the players were the attentive, including Miss Betty Hart, Miss Margaret Morgan, Miss Dorothy Harvey, Miss Mary Rival and Miss Sara Sibley, of Marietta; Mrs. Humphrey Wager, Mrs. Charles Gray, of Youngstown, Ohio; Miss Louise Standard, Mrs. John R. Ellis, Mrs. Ray Alderfer, of Chicago; Miss Louise Cooper, Miss Lucy Candler, Mrs. Leta Howard, Mrs. Eugene Harrington and Mrs. Julian Thomas.

Little Theater Guild Holds Meeting.

A very pleasurable evening was spent Wednesday at Cable Hall by members of the Little Theater guild of Atlanta, of which Charles Chalmers is president.

The business of considering changes in the constitution and by-laws in order to give wider scope to the operations of the guild occupied most of the evening, and was followed by a delightful program offered by Harry Pomar, of the guild.

The amended constitution offers opportunity for a number of committees in connection with the work of the guild, which will allow for the participation of a large number of the membership. Most of the amendments were passed by unanimous consent.

The program which followed and which was arranged by Mr. Pomar, and participated in by Erin Farley, as baritone; Walter Marvin, as reciter; Harry Pomar, as violinist, and Mrs. C. L. Patterson, as accompanist, was enthusiastically received by the audience.

The numbers were the "Serenade Espagnole," "Chaminade," "Melody" by Daves given by Harry Pomar on the violin with Mrs. Patterson accompanying, "Lullaby" and a group of songs, given by Mr. Farley; "Meditation" from Thais by Mr. Pomar; song with obligato, rendered by Mr. Farley and Mr. Pomar.

Mr. Marvin who has hitherto taken important parts in guild plays, rendered himself even more popular by several readings of a humorous nature.

Members elected by the guild Wednesday to prepare a slate consisting of two members for each elective office in the guild and authorized to present these names at the next guild meeting on Monday, October 2, were Peter Maguire, William Ennis, George Bush, Ben Atchison and Mrs. Bemis.

Mrs. Graves Gives Luncheon Party.

Mrs. George B. Graves gave a bridge party at her home in the Ponce de Leon apartments Thursday in honor of Mrs. Dudley Golding, of Wichita Falls, Texas, the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frank Rice, at their home on West Peachtree street.

The hostess was assisted in the entertainment of her guests by her cousin, Mrs. Lowry Porter.

Ten was served at the individual tables following the game.

The guest list numbered twelve.

Paul Johnson Will Entertain at Dance.

Paul Johnson will entertain this evening at a farewell dance at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Wood in Inman Park.

Mr. Johnson will leave next week for New Haven, where he will take an art course.

The guests will include Misses Elizabeth Plumb, Lucile North, Sarah Shugart, Louise Pink, Katherine Ellis, Nancy and Laurie Linthicum, Eleanor Rogers, Olive Hall, Leonard Anderson and Katherine Koonce, George Echols, Delmar Robertson, Allen Bartlett, Harlow Beach, George Bartlett, Bill J. DRESS

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

The Plain Skirt Has a Rival in One of Flat Flounces and There is Evidence on Every Hand That Dressmakers Will Attempt to Vary the Skirts We Have Worn for a Generation.

PARIS—It is too strong a statement to say that plain skirts face a downfall, but it is reasonable to say that French designers are weary of the flat line which the continuance of the chemise frock has perpetuated. The draped skirt was launched a year ago, so it is not new, but it continues to be the most popular variant from the skirt whose fabric is not manipulated. All the drapery morning don't expect that your children who wake at the normal time and stay awake will relish the idea of waiting an hour or two or three beyond the usual time for breakfast. An excellent compromise consists in having breakfast partly prepared the night before. If you have a fireless cooker have cereal prepared in it the night before, and then give the children instructions to get their cereal and milk or cream when they awake. This with bread and butter will easily satisfy their appetites. If cereal is cooked the night before in a double boiler older children may be trusted to light the fire beneath it and heat it for themselves. But the fireless cooker method is really better.

Another source of Sunday discomfort for children often is the fact that Sunday clothes are uncomfortable. New shoes are saved for Sunday. They are stiff or wrongly shaped. As soon as they become comfortable they are put out of the Sunday class and another stiff pair is bought for Sunday. (Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Care of the Broom.
When not in use, the broom should be hung up in a rack with the bristles up so the weight does not rest on the straws.

To Prevent Sticking.
Boil a few potato peelings with a little water for a few minutes in a new frying pan. Food cooked afterward in the pan will not stick.

A Floor Mop.
Cover an old broom with a piece of blanket or something soft and go over the kitchen floor with it each day. It will not take long, but will save you many hot and dirty scrubbing.

Black Satin Slippers.
After wearing black satin slippers for a time they usually become dusty looking, and if one just rubs them over with a dark cloth dipped in gasoline it will bring back the original luster to the satin.

Little Economies.
Do not throw away the sour milk. Delicious cookies, cakes, biscuits and pancakes can be made with it.

The water in which vegetables are cooked should not be thrown away. The chief nutriment of the vegetables is contained in this water and it will form the basis of an excellent soup.

BEHOLD THIS DRESS WITH A THOUSAND EYES.
If mirrors are tall tales then what a host of tales a gown embroidered all over with tiny mirrors could tell. Such a one was worn at the Grand Prix ball in Paris.

Seventy-five years ago the foreign commerce of New York and of New Orleans was practically the same.

A change in the English law is proposed by which the freehold property of a man who dies without leaving a will may be divided amongst all his children. As the law is at present the property goes to his eldest son.

There are other touches that interest women in this frock, notably the long small sleeve with its gaudy cuff edged with groups of fine tucks. There is also a stole collar which outlines a square neck opening. This is one of the several efforts to break women from the bad habit of cutting an oblong neckline in all their frocks.

The square neck appears to be the legitimate successor of this neckline borrowed from the Italian Renaissance. It is attractive. It permits the gown to rest well on the shoulders. It lengthens the line from the waist instead of shortening it.

Strangely to say, that while the public speak most disrespectfully of the bateau neckline, they do not accept the square one when the dressmakers offer it. In Paris the women have offset the ugliness of this neckline, and its tendency to slip and slide by running barrettes of black velvet ribbon across the shoulders. These are studded with rhinestones or cut steel.

The long sleeve as Premet shows it in this frock is bound to succeed. It is universal among the dressmakers. It may be finished with wrinkles over the wrist, or a gaudy cuff or a stiff barreled sector of the sleeve, or a circular ruffle. The ruffles are the cuffs extend upward on plain frocks.

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anne Rittenhouse.

SUNDAY IN YOUR HOME.
More than one child has grown to maturity with a deep and lasting dislike for Sunday engrained on his mind. As a child Sunday has been the unwelcome day of the week, and it takes much time to adult life to overcome this inbred antipathy for the day. More frequently this dislike for Sunday is due to the fact that there has been bad management of Sunday at home, rather than to any real dislike for church and Sunday school. It is easily within the powers of the housewife very often to make Sunday a pleasant day for the members of her household.

Waiting for meals long past usual meal times often is very trying for young children. Not only is it trying to their minds but it is trying to their digestions and general physical condition.

If you like to lie in bed Sunday

SECRET OF A GOOD DISPOSITION

A woman who carefully safeguards her health benefits her disposition. She will be happy and attractive to all. The world unfortunately is filled with sweet women who are unhappy because they are held back from usefulness by troubles so common among them. Fretfulness and nervousness rapidly destroy good dispositions. Sickly, all-worn-out women cannot make happy homes.

Lydell E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a safeguard of women's health. This is clearly proven by the many letters we are continually publishing in this paper, from women who have been restored to health and happiness by its use after years of suffering. Why don't you try it?—(adv.)

Miss Hallman Hostess at Bridge.

Miss Susie Hallman entertained her bridge club and a few extra guests at tea Tuesday afternoon at her home on Lombardy way.

Fourth National Club Entertainment.

The Fourth National Bank club gave the regular monthly dinner-dance at the Peacock cafe Tuesday evening, September 19.

The feature of the evening was a lecture given by Dean J. M. Watters, of the Georgia School of Technology, who spoke in behalf of the courses offered by the evening classes of the Georgia Tech school. Mr. Watters also emphasized the advantages of the courses offered by the American institute of banking, which will begin activities at an early date.

An interesting incident was the announcement of the marriage of Miss Nona Stephens and William P. Oliver, which occurred on Sunday, September 17.

Miss Anderson Weds Mr. English.

The marriage of Miss Frankie Marion Anderson and Horace Alexander English, which was solemnized at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon at the Third Baptist church, the Reverend T. A. McCutcheon officiating, will be of cordial interest to their many friends.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a three-piece dress of dark blue tulle, with hat of black tulle and veil trimmed with bird of Paradise feathers and wore a beautiful corsage of valley lilies and bride's roses. She is the very attractive and talented daughter of Mrs. A. A. Anderson and always took an active part in the social affairs of the younger set. Immediately following the ceremony which was witnessed only by the immediate family, the bride and groom left for a trip to the mountains.

Mrs. Yould To Give Recital.

Mrs. Duane Thomas Yould will present Miss Ellen Ross Lightfoot in dramatic recital at the Deaneur High school auditorium at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, September 23, the following will take part in the program: Miss Lightfoot, Mrs. Pauline Montague, Mrs. Alfred B. Sherwood.

MEETINGS

The executive committee of the Atlanta Drama league will hold its second meeting of the season at Phillips & Crew's this Friday, at 3 o'clock. Next Sunday, September 24, will be a rally day for the T. E. L. class of the Grant Park Baptist church. Mrs. J. S. McLemore, teacher of the class, has returned from a visit to Tampa and Jacksonville, Fla., and urges every member to be present. New members and visitors always welcome.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

THE DIVORCEE'S FIRST QUARREL.

In the paper the other day I read of a woman whose husband let her divorce him because she was in love with another man. On closer acquaintance, she made the astonishing discovery that the other man wasn't half the man her husband was, and that she had made a terrible mess of her life. "An hour after I got my divorce," she said, "I regretted it."

Of course that was pretty quick work.

I don't imagine many divorcees make that discovery quite so soon.

Just as Bad Faults.
But wouldn't you like to have a dollar for every person who gets a divorce to marry someone else and who makes the discovery, in the course of time, that someone else has faults as bad, though perhaps in different lines, as the partner from whom he or she has just parted?

I imagine those dollars would roll up into a sizable fortune in the course of a few years.

Of course the discovery that one's partner is not the marvelously understanding, invariably sweet tempered, always adoring person whom he or she has appeared during courtship is not confined to second marriage. But it seems to me it must be a far more painful, more depressing disillusionment when it comes as the anti-climax to an eternal triangle divorce.

That Terrible Moment.
One has said to oneself presumably: "This love that I feel is something different from any ordinary love. It is so unique, so wonderful that it is worth sacrificing conventions, worth going through the wretchedness of a divorce suit, worth making one and perhaps two innocent parties miserable, to gratify it."

And then there comes a day when things go wrong, you twain quarrel and for a moment dislike takes the place of that love. What a dreadful descent! And what terrible questions at once raise their head. "Was it really worthwhile?" "Was I simply fooled by an infatuation into going through all this?" "Have I made a wicked mistake?"

Better Turn Back?

If any man or woman who is thinking of taking this path would look ahead and picture the first quarrel, imagine the other party saying: "I can see now why you didn't find it easy to get along with your wife" or "I don't wonder your husband didn't understand you. I don't see how anyone could." I think a great many would draw back from the sharp turn and decide to try the old road a bit longer.

And, perchance, if they kept on and climbed the hill and so gazed through the hard going that putting the excitement of such a love affair behind one inevitably means, they would find the road pleasanter and sweeter than it had ever been before. I know more than one case where just that has happened.

'TIS AN OLD GLOVE THAT HAS NO TURNING

Says the opening in a pair of white kid gloves, "Madame has held me in the palm of her hand for many moons, I feign would see the light of day." And it was done. London exploits as the very ultima word, white gloves with the opening on the back of the hand and a one-button fastening. For style plus, black turnover cuffs are appended.

Tomorrow—Two Women.

Famous Naturalist Dies.

Denver, Colo., September 21.—Enos Mills, the naturalist and author, died at his home at Long's Peak, Colorado, early today.

Mr. Mills retired as usual at his home last night. He awakened early this morning, called his wife and complained of feeling ill. He died a short time later. Overwork and loss of strength following an accident in a subway car in New York last January are believed to have caused his death.

The dyeing of rare and costly Oriental rugs is done mostly by the women folk.

A fashionable woman of 1800 would not pay more than a dollar for a fine straw hat.

Fashion's Approval Has Established The Suit for Fall Wear

Distinctive New Models
Are Here in Styles Sufficiently Varied
To Please the Most Exacting

Most Pleasing Variety

No season within our memory has brought forth suits that are so distinctly different and new in character.

There are materials that are new, styles that are unique, and trimmings that are quite out of the ordinary.

Most pleasing to the discriminating woman will be the charming variety of the models displayed. One may choose that particular model which seems best fitted to express the wearer's own taste and personality.

The Colors

Especially beautiful are the many shades of blue, while the browns embrace all the charming hues seen in leaves and bark of trees and sun-browned autumn fields.

There are other colors shown, too, and the models in black hold a prominent and most distinctive place.

Some of the models in black are developed of richly beautiful brocade combined with Baby Lamb. Most unusual effects are shown in draped coats and skirts—both of irregular hem line.

Rich Trimmings

Very handsome indeed are the effects obtained in trimmings of elaborately worked braids, beads and hand embroidery. Most of them are in self color, while some are very attractive in bright introductions of colors suggestive of the Russian or Oriental.

A Charming Model

The suit shown is an exceedingly handsome model of softest brown Duveltyne.

The loose coat with bell sleeves shows a most unusual trimming of self material with hand embroidery and a charmingly becoming collar of soft Platinum Fox.

The Corsage of French blue crepe Romain is elaborately embroidered in brown silk threads. Loose, bell sleeves are hand worked also in the brown tones.

This Model$398.50

Prices of the Suits

The most modest purse will find suits of real character and quality well within reach. The price range is varied beyond enumerating—up to the most exclusive models of the world's best-known designers.

Suits at $29.50, $39.50, $45.00, $55.00, $68.50 and up to $398.50

CHAMBERLIN-JOHNSON-DuBOSE CO.

The Plain Tailored Suit

Many will rejoice in the news that the plainest of tailored two and three-piece suits are quite correct for the season. There is always an air of simplicity and smartness about the strictly tailored suit that makes them pre-eminently fitted for certain occasions.

In addition to the twill fabrics and serges are some quite handsome models in the new soft pile fabrics.

Navy blues, browns and blacks predominate.

The More Elaborate Suits

It is in the more elaborate suits in two and three-piece models that the designers have shown such varied and altogether charming taste and skill.

Rather long, low-waist lines are accentuated with coats that are loose, belted or in blouse effect.

Very beautiful new brocaded silk and wool fabrics are employed—also the soft Duveltyne and pile fabrics such as Presclosa, Panvelaine, Gerona and others.

The Use of Furs

Never were furs more lavishly or more effectively employed. In addition to many styles in collars and cuffs there are pockets of fur and often wide bands of fur entirely around the coat.

The furs in favor are the various fox furs, beaver, mole, caracul, baby lamb, squirrel and wolf.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Cincinnati and Boston Divide.
Boston, Mass., September 21.—Cincinnati took the first game of a doubleheader from Boston 4 to 2, largely due to Ford's error behind Cooney's fine pitching in the seventh when the visitors scored four runs. Watson's pitching was the deciding factor in the 5 to 2 Boston victory in the second game.

ACES TO OFFER SPECIAL CONCERT

Three Warner - Arranged Numbers on Program Tonight—"Song of India" Makes Hit.

The effect of Warner's Seven Aces, last night between 6 and 6:40 o'clock was a hit, but nothing to what it will be tonight when the Aces present their daily concert. Tonight's program by the Aces is notable for its special numbers and on it, also, is one request selection.

The number of telephone calls last night that greeted the concert by Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, was evidence enough of the way the Aces were missed Wednesday night when they played an engagement in Macon. Thousands were deprived of their usual 6 o'clock entertainment by the Aces and they were wholeheartedly glad when the Aces were back and playing their concert from Station WGM.

There are three special numbers on the program tonight. Every one of them is played with a special Warner arrangement, and listeners long ago learned that E. H. Warner arranged a dance number that has all of the harmony and music in the world and the snap that is lacking in so many dance orchestras.

The three special numbers for tonight are "Tricks," "Why Should I Cry Over You?" and "Strut in the Strutter's Hall." The request number, tonight is "When Buddha Smiles." The Aces last night from Station WGM opened their concert with one of their best numbers, "Out of the Shadows," a waltz, "Muscle Shoals Blues" and "Some Sunny Day."

Listeners have learned that whenever the Aces are on a program they are to have the best dance music for Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, is the best dance orchestra in the south.

IN THE AIR TO-DAY WGM.

(The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.) 6:00 to 6:40 P. M.—Concert by Warner's Seven Aces, The Atlanta Constitution orchestra, with B. H. Warner directing. With the Aces' concert will be sent Constitution features. Program by the Aces: 1. "By the Sapphire Seas," (request). 2. "Nobody Lied." 3. "Why Should I Cry Over You?" (To be introduced). 4. "When Buddha Smiles." 5. "Strut in the Strutter's Hall," (special arrangement). 6. "Tricks," (special arrangement). 6:40 to 6:50 P. M.—Demonstration by Operator A. W. Shropshire of Station WGM, of today's lesson in reception of international Morse code, which will be found in another column of today's radio department.

CALL BELLE ISLE TAXICABS

THE LETTER "T"

Tonight our lesson in reception of International Morse code will involve the first of the dash signals, or rather what we shall call the "dah" signals. The letter "T" is one dash. Now that you know the "dah" or dot letters, "E," "I," "U," "S" and "H," you are well on the way in the code for only different combinations of the "dah" with "dah" makes up the whole code alphabet.

The "dah" signal is heard as a signal just three times as long as "dit." In this way you distinguish "dit" and "dah."

Tonight when we send our demonstrations at 6 and at 9 o'clock, you will first be given the letter, "T," which will come as "dah." After this letter has been sent enough to firmly fix it in your minds, a review of the letters "E," "I," "U," "S" and "H," with the letter "T" also, will be transmitted.

FIFTEEN MINUTES OF RADIO EACH DAY

BY EDWARD N. DAVIS

LESSON NO. 54. Super-Heterodyne Reception. Radio frequency amplification, that is, amplification of the received radio signals before they have been subjected to rectification, has several decided advantages over audio-frequency amplification, which consists in magnifying the signals after they have been converted into oscillations having an audible frequency. One of these advantages is due to the fact that tube noises and other disturbances resulting from current variations are not magnified as greatly in circuits employing radio-frequency amplification.

The use of radio-frequency amplification in the reception of short wave lengths has its limitations, however, due to greatly increased capacity effects. The higher the frequency, the greater the effect of capacity, and at frequencies employed in broadcasting on short wave lengths, for example, the frequency of 833,300 cycles per second (corresponding to a wave length of 360 meters) the increased capacitance of the vacuum tubes and associated apparatus causes a partial short-circuiting of the radio-frequency currents.

To compensate for the limitations attendant on radio-frequency amplification, when used with high frequencies, E. H. Armstrong has originated a method of amplification known as the Super-Heterodyne. In this method, a local oscillation is combined with the received oscillation and "beats" are produced which have a frequency below that of the received oscillation but of a frequency above audibility. The beating oscillation thus produced is then rectified after which it is amplified through two or more stages of amplification and finally the amplified oscillation is rectified and impressed upon the receiving telephones with consequent reproduction of the tones of music or speech which originated at the transmitting station.

The accompanying diagram, in which filament battery connections have been omitted for simplicity shows the arrangement of circuits for the Super-Heterodyne method of reception. The circuit for the production of the local oscillation is shown at (A) and is so adjusted that the incoming signal, produces a "beat" frequency substantially above audibility.

For example, if the incoming oscillation has a frequency of 1,000,000 cycles per second, (corresponding to a wave length of 300 meters) and the heterodyne is adjusted to 1,050,000 cycles per second, a "beat" frequency of 50,000 cycles per second will be produced.

The combined currents of the 1,000,000 cycles and the 1,050,000 cycles are then rectified by the rectifier (D) and produce in the primary of the transformer (T) a direct current with a superimposed 50,000 cycle component. The primary and secondary of the oscillation transformer (T) are turned to 50,000 cycles current is amplified through the successive stages of resistance coupled radio-frequency amplification and the resultant amplified current is rectified by the detector (D-1).

Due to the fact that the received oscillation, modulated at the transmitting station by music or speech, retains this modulation through the various stages of amplification, the detector (D-1) by rectifying the modulated 50,000 cycle oscillation causes a modulated direct current to flow through the telephone receivers and thus reproduce the original tones of music or speech.

Berlin.—(By the Associated Press.) The Berlin newspapers announced today that a contract was concluded in Paris September 14 between a French construction syndicate, comprising eighty-eight building firms, and a Berlin firm, the purpose of reconstruction work in the devastated areas of France. It is expected 150,000 workers, of whom 40,000 will be German, will be employed in the work.

Of short-sighted people, more are to be found in the cities than in the country.

Believing the establishment of the fact that gossip regarding Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills was prevalent would strengthen the theory of an enemy motive for the murder—or the theory of a conspiracy, the Georgia Tech, advanced by Detective E. H. Parker, of Burlington, today, that a "self-appointed moral censor" might have committed the crime—other detectives spent the day visiting various members of the Georgia Tech and questioning them as to their knowledge of the gossip.

The first issue of this year's "Technique," the weekly issued by students of Georgia Tech, made its appearance on the Tech campus Thursday with words of welcome to the large Freshman class registering at Tech today, and several articles on campus life and activities.

The feature of the issue was an article on Tech's new president, Marion L. Brittain, who assumed office August 1. The Technique gives high praise to Dr. Brittain in a lengthy article, accompanied by his picture, and expresses the confidence of the student body in him, and in his management of the Georgia Tech project by which not only the school but the whole south and property nearby, the railroad shop property, the Golden Tornado, Tech traditions, Y. M. C. A. work at the school, "College Night," and Coach Alexander also feature the issue. The editors of the Technique include Charles Pearson, Jr., editor in chief, and Hugh R. Roberts, business manager. Contributors to the first issue include D. D. Robertson, F. R. McClellan, G. H. Echols, C. P. Johnson, C. P. Barrett, R. M. Matson, T. F. Stringer, E. S. Bullock, J. E. STOLEN DYNAMITE ON ABANDONED SHIP

Tampa, Fla., September 21.—A quantity of stolen dynamite was discovered this morning in an abandoned ship along the docks at Port Tampa by guards of the Atlantic Coast Line. Sheriff Spencer, who was called to the scene, is working on the theory that it was hid in the ship preparatory to its being used to damage the railroad shop property nearby. The owner of a rock crushing outfit in the neighborhood identified the dynamite as being stolen from him.

MAmmy, Who Was 50 Years Old When Civil War Began, Is Dead

Macon, Ga., September 21.—Darius Johnson, a negro mammy, who was 50 years old when the civil war broke out, died here tonight.

Symbolic flags for every county of the state is a new idea proposed in Massachusetts.

Forty-six years ago there was but one telephone in the world. Today there are 14,000,000 instruments in the United States alone.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has about 80,000 employees on its payroll.

Chicago, September 21.—Conflicting reports as to the wheat outlook kept traders from being today and prevented any big change in prices. The market closed unsettled at 7-8 cent net, declining to 1-2 cent advance, with December $1.00-3-8 to $1.01-1-2 and May $1.10-3-8 to $1.11-1-2. Out finished 3-8 to 5-8 cent down. Out finished 3-8 to 5-8 cent down. Out finished 3-8 to 5-8 cent down.

At first the wheat market tended downward, Liverpool and Winnipeg quotations having declined, and there being no actual fighting most affected. Constantine. Denials in the last few days that a tremendous amount of Canadian wheat had been purchased for shipment to Europe had a further bearish influence. With no signs of any important new export business being done, profit taking on the part of yesterday's buyers set in, but on every dip in prices the market showed constant power to absorb all the wheat that was offered. Unseasonable outlook of a clash between the United States and British forces spreading anew among wheat traders during the last part of the day. Nearly deliveries of wheat most affected. September went to a premium over December as a result of covering by shorts, but demand failed to broaden out sufficiently to lift the market as a whole. No sign that the Capper-Tincher bill had become a law was noted. The market was depressed through realizing sales on the part of holders who were determined to prevent profits slipping away. Provisions advanced higher in line with the hog market. Packers bought hard.
